4 Men Hurt In $500,000 Lynn Fire

BULLETIN

Three firemen and a coast guardsman were injured at the fire on the wharf of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company. They were David Ballard and Peter Perrault of Lynn, Charles Burgin of Swampscott and Coast Guardsman C. A. Boyam.

Nine Lynn firemen, overcome by smoke and suffering exposure and immersion, were dramatically rescued by coast guardsmen today after they plunged into Lynn harbor while battling a half million-dollar blaze on the wharf of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company.

Three other men, including two gas company employes, were also rescued after they attempted to save the firemen.

Quick response by the coast guard boat from the Nahant station saved the men from certain death.

Frantically trying to keep afloat in the freezing water, the men were lost from sight of those on the blazing wharf by the heavy clouds of smoke that swept over the city.

Their choking, piercing screams could be heard by fellow firemen on the dock, helpless to act until the coastguard boat arrived.

RAFT OVERTURNS

Waiting ambulances and cars rushed the 12 men to Lynn Hospital. One fireman, Charles McIntyre, was given the last rites of the church.

Some of the nine firemen were thrown into the water when an improvised raft on which they were standing, fighting the blaze from the water, was overturned by a heavy wind.

The others plunged into the harbor when they lost their balance on ladders which had been hooked to the top of the wharf.

The other injured firemen included District Chief William

Irish Unity Lost In Ulster Vote

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Feb. 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Viscount Craigavon's government, fighting union with the rest of Ireland, today had an absolute majority of at least 28 seats in the 52-member House of Commons of Northern Ireland.

Twelve contests were still undecided at 5:15 p. m. The tabulation of yesterday's general election was to be completed tonight.

Lord Craigavon had said that government victory would constitute a fresh mandate for his battle against union between Northern Ireland and Eire, as envisaged by the new constitution of the former Irish Free State.

Dooley Gets O'Hara Job At Track

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 10—Judge James E. Dooley today was named acting manager of Narragansett Park to succeed ousted Walter E. O'Hara.

At the same time, a new board of directors was elected to guide the destines of the Narragansett Racing Association. Both elections occurred at a special meeting in the Hotel Biltmore.

Three new faces appear on the six-man board. They are Morgan Belmont of the New York banking firm of August Belmont & Company, John C. Orr, Providence grain merchant, and John F. Letendre, Woonsocket racing man.

Re-elected were Judge Dooley, Raymond J. McMahon, association counsel, and Albert H. Daley of Providence.

BELMONT ACCEPTS

Belmont, who engineered the compromise settlement under which O'Hara resigned yesterday, accepted the post tentatively pending word from his associates in New York.

Orr entered the racing controversy last fall when he attached the association's accounts to collect a $95,000 feed bill. Letendre has been prominent in Rhode Island racing circles for some time.

Observers declared that the board in its present form could not be

Butler's Son Hurt In Train Leap

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 10 (INS)—Kevin Butler, 31, a son of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Pierce Butler, leaped through the closed window of a speeding passenger train near here today, suffering critical injuries. Little hope was held for his recovery.

Attaches at the Greensburg Hospital said he told them he was unable to explain his action. His wife and mother were flying to his bedside from New York City.

Butler suffered a fractured skull and vertebra and other injuries when he leaped through a closed window, shattering the glass and hurling himself into a ditch by the roadbed.

Clergy, Women Join To Ban 'Outlaws'

William Randolph Hearst's suggestion for an international congress of nations to formulate rules of war that will halt the ruthless mass murder of men, women and children in civilian populations won instant, worldwide acclaim and support today.

In Washington, following publication of Mr. Hearst's editorial in the Congressional Record, Capitol Hill became the receiving center of demands from all parts of the country that action be taken to make the international congress a reality.

In England, London newspapers were swamped by letters from all parts of the British Isles, urging the proposed conference of nations to restrain, at least, the slaughter of the innocents, particularly by aerial bombardment.

Locally, New England, birthplace of the spirit of America, led in the nationwide support of Mr. Hearst's proposal, voiced by World War veterans, members of the clergy, women's organizations and civic leaders and outstanding citizens.

Ban Backed In Congress

Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—With the introduction into the Congressional Record of an editorial by William Randolph Hearst calling for an international congress to outlaw barbarities of war, a mighty chorus of protests arose today on Capitol Hill against mass civilian murders in current conflicts.

Senator Capper (R.) of Kansas obtained unanimous consent of the Senate to have the Hearst editorial printed in the Record, which contains the proceedings of Congress.

Senators immediately made appeals for a world congress to revise the rules of warfare in the interest of humanity and civilization.

Public opinion was generally declared by senators to be a powerful weapon "to bring war lords to their senses" and stop air raids on communities having no strategic value—bombings that cause the death of thousands of non-combatant men, women and babies.

From Senator Lewis of Illinois, Democratic "whip" and a member of the Senate foreign relations committee, came an appeal to church organizations, patriotic societies and business groups to adopt resolutions denouncing barbarities of modern warfare.

He praised the editorial by Mr. Hearst in the Boston Evening American and other Hearst papers, calling for an international congress to revise the rules of warfare and outlaw the mass murders now being perpetrated in current wars.

BACKING OF PEOPLE

"I hope," said Lewis, "that Mr. Hearst, whose word carries great weight throughout the nation, will issue an appeal to the churches, civic groups and patriotic organizations to denounce the barbarities of modern warfare.

"I believe that if Mr. Hearst would send an appeal to the heads of all peace-loving nations

Barbarities Condemned

New England, birthplace of the spirit of America, voiced unqualified approval today of William Randolph Hearst's call for an international congress to outlaw the barbarities of modern war.

War veterans, the clergy, women's organizations, civic leaders and outstanding citizens joined in adding their voices to Mr. Hearst's suggestion.

Typical of the pledges of support voiced by representative New Englanders were the following:

HITLER BALKS ROYALIST MOVE AMID ARMY REVOLT RUMORS

LONDON, Feb. 10 (INS)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has moved put down "trouble" of an undetermined extent in a number of Pomeranian and other old monarchist regiments in Germany, it was learned here tonight.

Private advices received by the British Government contained nothing to indicate the unrest has yet reached serious proportions.

However, coming on the heels of revelation former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm had departed from Germany without a passport for a "ski-ing expedition" in Italy on Saturday, the news caused a sensation throughout Europe.

It was believed here Hitler has taken the necessary precautions to prevent a monarchist movement from spreading.

The nature of these precautions could not be learned. Some reports said Germany was planning to close her frontiers. Others spoke of an outright "revolt" in East Prussia and Pomerania, both aristocratic military strongholds, with large numbers of officers deserting and frontier guards strengthened.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Brussels said the foreign office there had officially confirmed that the Belgo-German frontier will be closed shortly.

DENIAL FROM BERLIN

Dispatches direct from Berlin denied one rumor that unrest had occurred in the crack "Berlin Watch" regiment, the favorite of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm during imperial days, whose officers are now selected as Hitler's own escorts.

Categorical denials from Berlin failed to stem the tide of rumor that some sort of a revolutionary uprising had occurred.

250 MILLION IN WPA RELIEF ASKED BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for immediate appropriation of $250,000,000 to meet relief needs during the next five months.

"Funds available at this time," the President wrote Speaker Bankhead, "will not only not take care of the additional burden caused by the recent increase in unemployment, but will require a sharp reduction in the near future of the number on the Works Progress Administration rolls."

WPA officials, anticipating the President's request, said most of the money would be used in industrial centers, especially the automobile manufacturing cities.

The money would be in addition to approximately $497,000,000 which WPA now has remaining from its original allotment for this fiscal year.

"The funds available on January 1, 1938," said the President, "would permit employment of an average of only 1,700,000 persons

'Stop This Mass Murder,' Cries Head of Disabled Vets

By JOHN J. LYONS

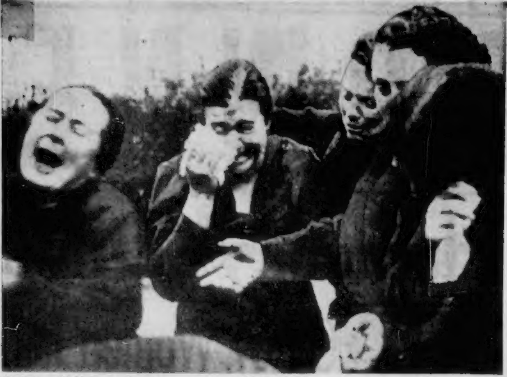
Massachusetts state commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War

"No one knows better than we the horrors of modern war. To Mr. Hearst belongs credit for a suggestion that cannot but have the deeply prayerful support of every thinking man and woman everywhere, regardless of nationality.

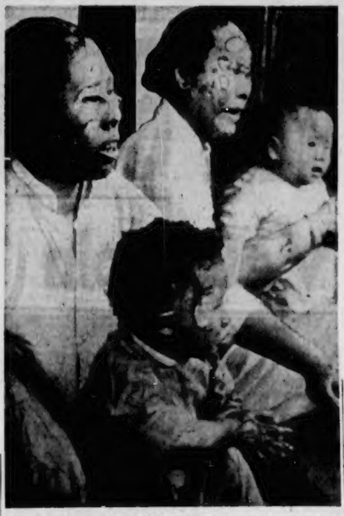
"Our organization is committed to a policy in support of cooperation among nations to prevent war. But, as Mr. Hearst has pointed out, war exists, in Europe and in Asia, today. The new horrors of destruction by aerial bombardment, both in Spain and China—the absolute ruthlessness of modern warfare when the new engines of death and desolation are unleashed without restraint—must emphasize in every human heart the necessity for some such international action as Mr. Hearst suggests.

"We, the disabled war veterans, at least met with our wounds in our country's uniform, with weapons in our hands, defending ourselves. And many of us know how impotent against the destructive forces unleashed against us we felt, even then. That horror was enough.

"Imagine the indescribable horror of present-day 'warfare,' unleashed without restraint upon defenseless women and children. It is not war. It is, as Mr. Hearst says, mass murder—the mass murder of civilian populations. It is scientific bestiality and spells the ruin of civilization unless it is stopped."



War's horrible inhumanity—its savage and ruthless brutality—were well exemplified when rebel air raiders bombed Lerida, Spain, last All Saints' day. One bomb demolished a school, killing more than 50 little children. Photo shows weeping, heartbroken mothers after they had identified their children's bodies among the heap of mangled corpses that littered the debris and were tossed into the street. THAT'S MANKIND'S WAR!



Victims of war crazed militarists in the Far East—Skin, horribly seared, peels from the faces of these Chinese women and children as they sit on a Shanghai sidewalk awaiting transportation to a hospital. Women and children were among the 48 mutilated when an incendiary bomb exploded in the International Settlement before the city fell to the Japanese.

An expectant mother, her vitals strewn over the "good earth" with her unborn child, lifted her face toward the sky as if beseeching heaven to halt man's bestial inhumanities in China. A Japanese air raider had just passed that way. One bomb was enough to account for two lives—one unborn. Photo was made by Harrison Forman, explorer and author. AND THAT'S WAR!

to join in a convention for revision of rules of warfare, he would have the backing of the American people."

Some senators said they were pessimistic over the possibility military machines controlling some nations would join a conference to outlaw brutality in warfare. But they lauded the campaign of the Hearst newspapers, saying it should have beneficial results in arousing the peoples of the world.

McADOO RAPS POWERS

Senator McAdoo (D.) of California, secretary of the treasury during the World War, in denouncing war barbarity, delivered a stinging rebuke to the great powers who have violated their solemn agreements." He said:

"I am in favor of any reasonable step which will eliminate the brutality and barbarity of war. There is no conceivable justification for slaughtering non-combatant men, women and babies.

"The great difficulty is to secure a common agreement among the powers outlawing such methods; and after such agreements are made, if they can be, to secure respect by the signatories of treaty obligations.

SANCTITY OF TREATIES

"The gravest injury which has been done to civilization since the World War has been the repudiation by the great powers of treaty obligations. The whole basis of modern civilization between nations has been the sanctity of treaties. This basis has been destroyed and no one can any longer expect that any repudiating nation will observe any new contract which they may incur.

"Let us hope that repudiation of treaties may be outlawed and that the basis of honor and square dealing may again become the foundation of a civilized order.

"I heartily agree with Mr. Hearst," said Senator Capper. "He is on the right track. Warfare today carries us back to the days of primitive man—savagery, butchery, air raids on peaceful hamlets quartering not a single soldier and having no strategic value.

"There should be convened a world congress to study this problem. I feel certain that peoples generally throughout the world would heartily join in outlawing the barbarities of war that have been revealed in the Sino-Japanese war and the civil war in Spain.

"It is a disgrace to humanity the way wars are being conducted. Of course, war of itself is to be abhorred. Sherman was right when he said, 'War is hell,' but certainly if nations are going to fight there ought to be rules against the outrages upon humanity now being inflicted. The orders of the blood-crazed militarists seem to be to kill everybody, take no prisoners and lay everything to waste.

"I am urging to the best of my ability adoption of a constitutional amendment that will permit the people to vote on whether this country should fight in a war of aggression, if and when that issue arises. My amendment would not call for such a vote if our country were attacked."

Senator Gibson, (R.) of Vermont, likewise denounced the barbarities of warfare today.

"You cannot over emphasize my indignation over the savage methods of warfare now being employed in the Sino-Japanese war and in Spain's civil war.

"Every decent-minded person abjures the bombing of cities where no strategic advantage is to be gained, where thousands of non-combatants are killed or maimed for life. These atrocities cry out to humanity to do something about it. There ought to be a world congress to set up some kind of rules of warfare."

Joining in the condemnation of war barbarities were Senators Thomas (D.) of Kentucky, and Miller (D.) of Arkansas.

"Public opinion is a powerful weapon," said Miller. "I believe that if the civilized nations will vigorously denounce the outrages upon humanity in the wars now going on, it will have a salutary effect.

Favors U. S. Co-operation in Drafting Warfare Rules

"I am in favor of the United States cooperating in drafting whatever rules of warfare may be necessary to outlaw the bombing of communities, with awful toll of lives of innocent people.

"It would depend upon the moral influence of the people to stop this barbaric method of warfare. But I would not have our nation join any other nation in attempting to stop these practices by force. Our people want to keep out of foreign wars."

Senator Thomas (D.) of Utah, said:

"Rules of war implicitly provide against the outrages that are now beging committed. To kill innocent women and children is not in accord with the rules of warfare or public opinion generally.

"But I doubt that anything would come from a universal agreement to stop these practices. It would take something more than resolutions. If the governments at war now are not willing to abide by the present rules, how can they be expected to abide by a new set of rules?"

Senator Logan said:

"Right-thinking people all over the world abhor the brutality of present warfare. Certainly the American people condemn it with all the vigor at their command."

After having the Hearst editorial read into the Congressional Record, Senator Capper said:

"I desire to call the attention of the Senate to an open letter published in the Boston Evening American, and in other papers, by William Randolph Hearst. In his letter Mr. Hearst suggests a plan to outlaw certain barbarities of warfare today, and just as in the past the nations of the world have agreed not to use dum-dum bullets.

"Mr. Hearst points out that if the world is to remain civilized we must devise a new and humane code of warfare. One of the agreements suggested would be to abolish the bombing of non-military places and of non-combatants from the air.

"Non-combatants—men, women and children—should be freed from murderous attacks of airplanes and military ordnance by agreement among the nations.

"With that sentiment I thoroughly agree."

More Endorse Hearst's Plan to Humanize War

By MORRIS SHEPPARD

Senator from Texas

Chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—Mr. William R. Hearst has expressed what all of us have been thinking, when he says that the time has come for the civilized world to devise a new code of warfare, under which even though wars may continue civilization at least can be saved.

If war continues to be waged with the barbarity which we see in every part of the earth today, with civilian populations subjected to horrors heretofore inflicted only upon combatants, it is certain that civilization cannot much longer continue to exist.

The whole world will go down into chaos of unrestricted human slaughter, and the dark ages once more will engulf humanity, and all hope of further human progress in the arts and sciences of civilization will be gone forever.

Mr. Hearst's idea of a congress of the nations no doubt will meet with an immediate and favorable response.

I know of no other way in which the moral force of the world might be exerted except along the lines suggested by Mr. Hearst.

(Special to Boston Evening American)

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 10— Argentina's, Foreign Minister, Nobel Peace Prize winner Carlos Saavedra Lamas, and the man slated to succeed him, Enrique Rodriquez Larreta, today joined in vigorous indorsement of William Randolph Hearst's proposal for a world congress to end the barbarities of war.

Lamas, who will shortly leave office with the expiration of President Augusto P. Justo's term, said:

"In view of the fact that I shall leave office in a few days, it would be unwise for me to make a statement compromising my successor.

"But it is my personal opinion that all nations of the world should oblige their governments to participate in an international congress for the humanization of warfare and I congratulate W. R. Hearst for his splendid initiative."

Larreta, noted writer, jurist and diplomat mentioned as the most likely successor to Lamas, commented:

"If W. R. Hearst's initiative is successful, civilization will indeed be indebted to him."

England 'Bound' to Back Plan

Ex-British Admiralty Head Writes Views

The following statement by the Right Honorable Albert V. Alexander, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, hails Mr. William Randolph Hearst's proposal for outlawing barbarism in warfare as a practical suggestion within the realm of achievement.

By the RT. HON. ALBERT V. ALEXANDER

Member of Parliament and former First Lord of the British Admiralty.

(Special Cable)

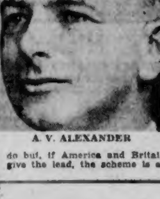
LONDON, Feb. 10—Everybody here with any humanity or soul will welcome the move to outlaw indiscriminate bombing of women and children whether near a military objective or not.

That the move comes from America, which is immune to such hideousness, must commend itself to every civilized person. England is bound to line up with America in such a proposal.

While I am in favor of outlawing any nation which declines to subscribe to the proposal or violates its tenets, nevertheless I think this recourse might be entirely unnecessary.

Once the great English-speaking democracies embark on this ideal and show the world they are serious, other nations dare not do otherwise but follow.

I do not care nor can I prognosticate what other nations will do but, if America and Britain give the lead, the scheme is as good as accomplished.



A. V. ALEXANDER

It is not an impracticable ideal. Its achievement is well within the realms of achievement.

People may say there is already in existence the League of Nations which is capable of fulfilling all that is outlined in the Hearst scheme.

But, as the League does not include the United States, Germany, Italy and Japan then nobody, however keenly devoted to the League, can quibble about establishment of a Congress of Nations which could concentrate solely on this desirable aim of saving women, children and non-combatants from the slaughter of aerial and other bombardments.

If war is absolutely unavoidable then surely its machinations should be concentrated purely on military objectives.

All Britain Backs Plan for Air Raid Ban

LONDON, Feb. 10 (INS) — A tremendous wave of sentiment for humanization of warfare swept England today as letters poured into newspaper offices from all parts of the country in favor of the drive to restrict combat to military forces and objectives.

The letters demanded and implored that something be done to safeguard women, children and non-combatants from the horrors of modern war, especially aerial warfare.

Proposals for an international agreement to outlaw bombing of non-military objectives evoked spontaneous approval from the British public, and promised to develop into one of the greatest non-partisan movements England has ever known.

British newspapers of all shades of political opinion are supporting the idea—from the conservative Times of London to the radical Daily Worker.

Meanwhile, International News Service learned, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has requested British foreign office experts to hasten completion of their survey of the problem and practical means of enforcing a ban on aerial bombing of civilian populations.

It is understood one proposal under consideration calls for establishment of neutral safety zones, under the Red Cross flag, in all European nations. These zones, under this plan, would be declared immune from military attack of any kind by international agreement.

Severe penalties would be levied against any nation violating such an accord.

At the same time, the British government drove forward with efforts to reach an international air pact, including the United States, to reduce aerial slaughter of civilians in the present and any future wars.

New England Drive On Mad Warfare

everywhere, regardless of nationality.

MASS MURDER

Imagine the indescribable horror of present-day 'warfare' unleashed without restraint upon defenseless women and children. It is not war.

It is, as Mr. Hearst says, mass murder—the mass murder of civilian populations. It is scientific beastiality and spells the ruin of civilization unless it is stopped.

MAYOR TOBIN—In the World War both the Allies and the Central Powers failed to distinguish between combatants and non-combatants. Air raids snuffed out the lives of thousands of defenseless women and children far removed from the battle lines. Similar tactics now are being used in the Orient and in Spain.

William Randolph Hearst and his newspapers are to be commended for their endeavors to prevent this needless slaughter of defenseless women and children.

MISS MILDRED LAMB, Massachusetts state commander, Women's Auxiliary of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War—Mr. Hearst's suggestion will strike a responsive chord in the heart of every woman, everywhere in the world, whose husband, sweetheart, father, son or brother passed through the horrors of the World War.

DEATH FROM SKIES

Thoughout the world today, women are looking anxiously from their loved ones to the skies—skies that may open up to rain down sudden, horrible death.

Does any mother want her baby blown to bits?

Does any mother want any other mother's baby blown to bits?

The women of the world will united behind Mr. Hearst's plea.

REVEREND LEWIS O. HARTMAN, editor of Zion's Herald, weekly publication of the Methodist-Episcopal Church.—Civilization today stands at the crossroads. What we are witnessing in China and in Spain is merely a demonstration—a warning—the handwriting on the wall—of frightfulness to come if man, in his hatred of his neighbor, does not agree to some restraint.

APPALLING FRIGHTFULNESS

War never is beautiful. There is no fineness in it, no "romance." Modern warfare with its blood-encrusted trenches, its mangled bodies, its shell-pocked landscapes, is not played with boxing gloves. Its frightfulness is appalling.

But Mr. Hearst is right: If we can not yet have peace, at least we can, in common decency as men not animals, agree to protect the innocent and the defenseless against horror, ruthlessness and destruction.

It is the purpose of contending armies to destroy one another. We would stop that, too, if we could. But if we cannot agree to that, at least let us agree not to destroy helpless men, women and children.

DESTROY THEMSELVES

The nations of the world must come to some agreement to restrain themselves in the exercise of the new powers of destructiveness placed in their hands by modern science. Even though war is the very negation of law and order, there must be some law, some order.

Else, in their frightful unleashing of destruction upon the innocent and defenseless populations of their cities, the nations will destroy not only each other but themselves.

Maine Convicts Admit Boston Kidnapings

2 Joke About Crimes As Police Question Them in Lineup

Two fugitives from a Maine penal institution today admitted at the headquarters line-up that they had taken a leading part in Boston's recent crime wave.

The men are Edward McHarg, 23, of Chelsea, and Frank Parker, 22, alias Roasaire Pomerleau, of Cambridge.

McHarg was seized by 10 detectives, who were waiting in a nearby hallway, yesterday in Medford street, Charlestown.

With him was Theresa Cantania, 23-year-old attractive divorcee, of Short street, Charlestown, who was held for questioning.

Parker was arrested later, after he had put up a struggle against police, who trailed him to his lodgings in Green street, Cambridge.

Said by police to have escaped last January from the Androscoggin County jail at Auburn, Me., the two alleged bandits are accused of crimes that include holdups, kidnapings and automobile robberies.

Confronted by more than 150 police officers from this and surrounding cities, the pair named a third man, known as "Wilfred," as their accomplice.

Detectives, meanwhile, scoured Greater Boston in search of him. A series of unsuccessful raids were made during the night in the drive to apprehend him.

KIDNAPED DOCTOR

Among other crimes they allegedly confessed was the kidnaping of Dr. David Rothschild of Foxboro State Hospital. They also admitted a $900 Somerville robbery and were identified by Mary Ellard, 23, of Everett as the men, who, with a companion, held up a drug store in that city, police said.

The doctor was seized near North Station and later thrown from his automobile. His automobile was used a short time later in a $900 holdup at a Somerville drug store and sub-postal station.

GIRL FACES QUIZ

The second kidnaping was that of Earl Smith, North Dighton policeman, who was surprised in his machine on Derne street, Beacon Hill, driven to Somerville and robbed of $26.

Smith identified the pair as they stood in the lineup and recounted the incident to police.

The automobiles of both victims were later used in the crime outbreak which resulted in day and night patrol duty for hundreds of Boston officers.

GOOD TIME IN LINE

Apparently scornful of the long prison sentences which their alleged escapades may net them, the two suspects "put on a show" in the line-up, laughing and joking with police and others in the file.

Parker, in particular, spent most of his time kidding Henry Stone, 39, of Manchester, N. H., who was identified eight times as the operator of a petty confidence game.

Stone's racket, according to police, was to pose as a New Hampshire trooper and victimize Boston residents. He admitted from the line-up that he would tell his "suckers" that his car had broken down and that he needed money to get home, promising to send the loan back by mail.

Police said they found a .38 calibre revolver and 200 cartridges in Parker's room as well as several hundred dollars in bills and change. Hundreds of pennies, police stated, was part of the loot taken in Monday night's holdup at Turner's Drugstore, Pearl street, Somerville.

POLICE IN 4-DAY HUNT

Persistent efforts by police brought about the capture of Parker and McHarg.

The climax came after a four-day methodical checkup of cafes, night clubs and other establishments the wanted men were believed to frequent.

Bearing rogues' gallery pictures, the police questioned persons in these places until they had obtained identifications. Then they set the trap.

The police participating in the dogged hunt were Sergeants John V. Miller, John E. Cullinan and Thomas E. Keating and Special Officers John R. Donovan, Leon DeRoehm, James Mahoney, and John J. Cashman.

Churches Pray Nazi Judges Show Justice

BERLIN, Feb. 10 (AP)—Confessional churches continued special intercession services today in behalf of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, whose trial on charges of grave offenses against the Nazi regime is in recess until Feb. 19. Prayers were offered for the militant minister as well as for divine guidance for the judges, that they may reach a just verdict.

Winter Heads Back for Spell

Cold Blasts to Rout Moderate Spell

King Winter, who has been AWOL for a couple of weeks, came back today just to prove he's still got some cold weather in store for New England.

Balmy temperatures prevalent hereabouts are due to take a dive, according to the local weather man. At 9 a. m. the mercury had dropped 10 points, descending from 46 at midnight.

The coldest spot in the United States was Sault Ste. Marie, Minn., were zero was recorded. Coldest on the weather map was White River, Ont., with 34 below. It was 65 below at 77,440 feet above Boston, according to messages flashed from the automatic weather balloon.

And that whistling noise you heard this morning was a 31-mile-per-hour wind.

Madman Hunted At Medfield

Medfield and surrounding towns were thrown into a new furore today with the escape of another maniac from the Medfield State Hospital.

At an early hour today capture of the escaped man, Edmund Bouret, had not been effected, although state troopers patrolled the highways and a heavy guard of Natick police had been thrown around his home in that town.

In search for the fugitive, Edmund Bouret, state troopers were patrolling the highways throughout today and a heavy guard of Natick police was thrown around his home in that town.

Occurring within a few days of a petition signed by society folk and other residents of Dover, Natick and other towns that adjoin Medfield for better protection against escaped patients, the search caused a new storm of protest.

Bouret, hitherto figured by doctors as "a more or less harmless patient," vanished after the evening meal last night.

Charlestown Youth Is Stabbed During Quarrel

John Hobson, 44, of Decatur street, Charlestown, was held in bail of $1000 on a manslaughter charge in Charlestown court today in connection with the fatal stabbing of his 24-year-old son.

Judge Charles S. Sullivan ordered the case turned over to the grand jury after testimony concerning the quarrel which resulted in the death of James Hobson last night.

An original charge of murder was changed to the less serious offense during the hearing.

Father and son, both unemployed, had been drinking, according to the sole witness of the tragedy, William Briday, of Woodlawn avenue, Jamaica Plain, nephew of the father.

The youth was pronounced dead on arrival at Haymarket Relief Hospital. One of three knife wounds pierced his heart.

Hobson was standing on the sidewalk awaiting the arrival of police. Previously, he had run several blocks to a drugstore to telephone for medical aid for his son.

Police quoted Briday as stating that father and son began a battle of words which led to punches. He said the father had been knocked to the floor prior to the fatal stabbing.

Senators to Give Hearing to Bridges

Labor Leader Will Get Chance to Fight Deportation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—Gerard Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, said today a deportation hearing for Harry Bridges, West Coast maritime labor leader, would be given shortly.

Reilly made this statement to reporters after appearing before a closed session of the Senate commerce committee, which has been investigating Bridges' status in the United States in connection with a broad survey of maritime labor conditions. Bridges was born in Australia.

Chairman Copeland (D.) of New York said after the session the Bridges matter "was closed as far as this committee is concerned."

"It is now between Mr. Bridges and the Labor Department," he added.

Reilly said that under normal routine Bridges would be served with a warrant, or subpoena, either in San Francisco, his home, or Seattle, where charges asking his deportation were filed.

The solicitor said he was unable to say just when the hearing would be held because the Labor Department "must get depositions from two or three more witnesses."

Reilly was called before the committee to produce confidential reports from the Seattle Immigration office, including depositions which Copeland said recommended the arrest and deportation of Bridges.

HOPE DARE

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10 (INS)—Hope Dare, former Ziegfeld beauty captured with Dixie Davis, accused New York racket ruler, was free today after a charge of harboring fugitives was dismissed.

She threw the court into turmoil, screaming at the top of her voice, before Magistrate Beifel told her:

"New York doesn't want you. Philadelphia doesn't want you, so now you can get out."

Miss Dare's exit was enlivened by her throwing a vial of smelling salts into the face of one camera man and hitting another with a handbag.

Dowd Will Press Logan Charges Next Week

Meanwhile Trustees To Meet to Map Their Action

Investigation of charges voiced concerning the administration of Miss Laura Logan, superintendent of nurses at Boston City Hospital, will be launched by the city council committee on hospitals next week.

This was confirmed by City Councillor John F. Dowd, chairman of the committee, today. An order for the investigation will be submitted to the council Monday, he stated.

Members of the hospital trustees today, meanwhile, continued to defend Miss Logan as "one of the outstanding nurses in the United States."

There will be a trustees' meeting tomorrow, at which time the course of action to be pursued by the board will be discussed.

Dowd, who formulated the charges against Miss Logan and who introduced the order passed by the council last week asking Mayor Tobin to ask the trustees summarily to discharge her, will preside at the investigation of his charges against her.

He was in possession of a petition today, signed, he said, by 306 of the 312 nurses at the hospital, asking Miss Logan's removal.

The six who have not signed, Dowd stated, the nurses in the children's ward, which is under the direction of Dr. Martin W. English, who also is one of the hospital trustees.

They were unwilling to sign because they take orders from Dr. English rather than from Miss Logan, Dowd explained.

Peabody Rites Tomorrow in Salem Church

General, Known as Lawyer, Sportsman Dies in Milton

Funeral services for General Francis Peabody, 83, prominent lawyer, business man and sportsman, will be held tomorrow at noon at Grace Church, in Salem.

He died at his home, Brush Hill road, Milton.

General Peabody was a member of one of New England's best known families. He was born in Salem and educated abroad, returning to be admitted to the Suffolk County bar in 1873.

He gained high standing in the law profession and also was well known in the real estate and banking fields. He ran for mayor of Boston in 1894 and for three years served on the staff of Governor William E. Russell. During the war, he was active in Belgian Relief and Red Cross work.

General Peabody was a well known oarsman and also fond of horses. He was married in 1881 to Rosamond Lawrence, daughter of the late Abbott Lawrence. The couple had three daughters, Rosamond (Mrs. B. Nason Hamlin), Martha (Mrs. Montague W. Prowse), and Sylvia (Mrs. Clarence V. F. Mitchell).

'Little Man' Loan Plans Drafted By RFC

Jones to Reveal All Details in 10 Days; Insurance Urged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—The administration extended a virtual promise today to help small business men borrow money.

Although details were withheld pending further study, Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was reported ready to disclose the loan arrangements within a week or 10 days.

His intention was made known by Secretary of Commerce Roper, who was host to a thousand small business men at last week's turbulent conference.

Speculation on the proposal ranged from mere continuation of RFC lending to elaborate systems of new federal credit agencies and federal insurance of private loans to business.

MAY EASE RFC POWERS

Usually well informed officials said they "guessed" the administration was not ready to do anything more drastic than to extend and possibly liberalize the type of lending which the RFC has been doing for more than three years.

Under the past RFC program, industrial loan authorizations totaled about $190,000,000, of which about $109,000,000 was actually loaned. This set-up, however, was described as over-cautious by the small business delegates, who suggested either federal insurance or direct loans from another agency.

The insurance idea was urged today by Senator Pepper (D.) of Florida, who introduced a bill to authorize the RFC to do the insuring.

$100,000 FOR 5 YEARS

His proposal would permit the RFC to guarantee ank loans to businessmen up to $100,000 for five years, provided the loan were backed by real estate or other property worth 125 per cent of the amount of the loan.

The banks would be permitted to charge a maxumum of 6 per cent interest plus a maximum of one per cent service charge, and the RFC would collect an insurance premium of one-half to one per cent.

Rep. Kopplemann (D.) of Connecticut is sponsoring a bill to create a Federal Intermediate Credit Corporation, which could discount business loans or lend money directly to business unable to obtain private financing.

2 Lynn Men Fined In Betting Case

Two Lynn men were given fines totalling $500 in Lynn court today after they were found guilty of gambling charges by Judge Ralph W. Reeve.

William J. Wasilewcz, 26, of Western avenue, was fined $250 on a charge of maintaining rooms where bets were being registered and $100 on a charge of maintaining a gaming nuisance. He appealed and was held in $1000.

Nathan Gordon, 49, of Summer street, was fined $150 on a charge of allowing rooms to be used for bets. He also appealed and was hel din $500.

Gen. Johnson Says:

WIDOWS' PENSIONS PROPOSED

Cost to Nation Likely to Run Into Billions

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—If the bereaved families of men who wore uniforms in 1918, are to be pensioned, this country will be saddled with a charge that will run into billions and could continue well into the next century.

The proposed pension bill makes a few exceptions but among them is not the requirement that the loss of the husband or father should have been in any way related to his service or that his family needs the money. It is enough that he served and that his family wants the dough.

If a man was in any way weakened or hurt in military service it is incontestable that society has a duty to save him and his dependents harmless from the results of his wounding.

But what possible argument can there be for a public obligation to a man's family, merely because he has performed the first, the oldest, and the most essential obligation of citizenship?

When Og, the first cave-man, who dimly saw the advantage of ganging-up, began ug-glubbing to Ug about it, the conversation, translated from ug-glub, may have been something like this:

"Hey what's the idea of letting that big bum in the next valley come over the hill and carry away our women, our dogs and our pelts just because he is strong and can lick any one of us in a two-some? Together we can clean him like a fish.

"We'll get old lame Andy (short for Neanderthal) to watch for him and the next time he comes messing around here you and me and Trinil and Pilty (nickname for Piltdown) will gang-bust him. After that we can live in peace. That goes not only for him but for that Heidelberg Heinie or any of the Cro-Magnon raiders."

* * *

When something like that happened, the earliest "social compact" was made and men progressed from the family to the tribe on the way to the nation.

It kept the peace but it did something else. It raised an essential obligation for any able-bodied man who had enjoyed that peace, to make good on the promise that made peace possible at any time it was ever threatened.

Ug had given a hostage to fortune. When wars weer small and George was willing, he could say, "Let George do it," and we had volunteers. They were a special class enttitled to special favors. But that day is gone forever. Whole nations are now armies from the farthest farm to the foremost front.

In the World War, we selected men to march with the flags and other men to stay at the machines—each in the place where the nation needed him most. After December 1, 1917, we didn't even permit men to volunteer.

We took four million men from civil life and had seven million more ready. Two million got to France but not a million were ever exposed to danger. Far from injuring most of these men, less than 200,000 were casualties of any kind and the records clerly show that an overwhelming majority were bettered both physically and mentally.

The argument is always: "They took the risk." The answer is: "Yes and so under the system of 'Selective Service,' did the whole male population between the ages of 18 and 45. 'They also serve who only stand and wait.'

Furthermore, about this "taking the risk stuff," a colored selected man, marching to a mobilizing camp in 1918, was asked: "Whah ye' goin' Rastus?" He answered: "Ah ain't goin' nowhah, I'se bein' took."

It would be nice to take care of these widows—and all widows. But there is no obligation. It's a political racket and the public official who doesn't condemn it as such isn't doing his job.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Hitler's house-cleaning of military and diplomatic conservatives looks miles away from the American naval building program, but there is an indirect connection between the two just the same.

Two factors were behind the house-cleaning:

1. Leaders of the German army never have been pro-Nazi, have looked upon Hitler as a good rabble-rouser to be used by them, but to be relegated to the side-lines when the military were ready to take over. This was behind the Reichswehr's consideration of the Hohenzollern family or the Duke of Windsor as a new Emperor of Germany, previously reported in this column. Hitler knew that he would have to act first or be acted upon.

2. Hitler has been much stronger for cooperation with Mussolini than his army chiefs. Also he is more excitable and bellicose than the generals.

As far as the rest of the world, including the United States, is concerned, the latter is the factor to be watched.

THUMBS DOWN ON DUCE—When Mussolini made his pilgrimage to Berlin, one of the pledges given him by Hitler was that Germany would send more troops into Spain. But this was exactly contrary to the wishes of the General Staff. So instead of more troops, Hitler woke up to find that there were fewer German troops in Spain than at the time he had given his pledge to Il Duce.

Chief opponent of co-operation with Mussolini was General von Fritsch, commander-in-chief of the army. He did not hesitate to talk bluntly to Der Fuehrer about certain things he didn't like about the Nazi regime, one of them being the persecution of Christianity.

Fritsch's wife is a devout religionist, as are many army leaders, and Fritsch deliberately thwarted Hitler's paganism campaign by decreeing that German soldiers could go to church.

The German army opinion of Mussolini is that he is too cock-sure regarding England. German generals have a healthy respect for England's fighting qualities. All of them fought in the World War, and the digging-in qualities of both the British and French are fresh in their memories.

On the other hand, the Italians came into the war late, did not participate in many severe campaigns, and did not give a good account of themselves when they did.

The German general staff sent six observers with General Graziani during the Ethiopian campaign, who reported that the Italian army had improved. General Von Blomberg, after witnessing the Italian maneuvers in Rome, also gave the same report. Nevertheless, the German general staff still has more respect for the fighting qualities of the French and British than for the Italians.

RUSSIAN OBJECTIVE—Mussolini's field of activity lies in the Mediterranean, where Great Britain is his inevitable enemy. But more conservative German generals are extremely skeptical of Il Duce's complete confidence that he can bring the British to their knees.

Instead, they would prefer to remain as friendly as possible with the British, and concentrate on Russia, with whom Britain never has been over-cordial.

This is the view not only of the now ousted General von Fritsch but also of Baron von Neurath, now ousted as foreign minister. Prior to last week this group was a brake on the emotional and frequently fanatical Hitler.

So difficult was it to curb Hitler's emotions that the general staff did not tell him of the Spanish bombing of the German battleship Deutschland until four days after it happened and until after the Spanish city of Almeria already had been bombarded in retaliation. The generals were afraid Der Fuehrer would demand war.

MUSSOLINI DOCTRINE — On the other hand, the attitude of Mussolini and the warring Nazis is that Britain's rearmament, plus U. S. naval building, plus growing co-operation between these two countries is a reason for early war.

On a long range armament program, they argue, Britain has the money and the raw materials to build, while Italy and Germany have not. Therefore they are relatively much better prepared now than they will be two years hence.

Until two months ago, however, not even the more Nazi-minded generals in the Reichswehr thought Germany was prepared for war. One general staff officer, passing through the United States en route from Tokyo, reported to diplomatic friends:

"We have less raw material reserves today than we had near the end of the war in 1917. How can we possibly start until we have either more reserves or more inventions? It will take two years at least."

And he told of various substitutes German scientists were inventing for wool, rubber, coffee, etc., adding that as yet they were all too expensive.

GERMAN GRANARY — Since that time, however, an important thing has happened. Rumania, the greatest granary and oil preserve of Europe, has joined the Nazi nations. During the World War, Germany waged a swift and intense campaign to conquer Rumania and get her raw materials. Now she has ready access to them without fighting.

These two things have done more to change the war prospects of Europe than at any time in a dozen years. Number one is the Nazification of Rumania. Second is the ousting of the conservatives in the German army and diplomatic service.

War is much closer as a result of last week's happenings than it was before.

'T. R.' in Letter Foretold Jap War

Former President Warned Taft U. S. Faced Crisis to Bar Nipponese

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (INS)—A hitherto unpublished letter, written by Theodore Roosevelt in 1910 to his successor in the White House, William H. Taft, warning that the United States should not interfere with Japan in Asia unless prepared to go to war, was brought up today by opponents of the administration's $800,000,000 naval expansion program.

The letter was read to the House Naval committee by Representative Luckey (D) of Nebraska, leader of the "Little Navy" bloc in the House.

Describing the letter as "amazing in its uncanny prophecy" of the current Anglo-Asiatic situation, Luckey said it was "written by the most belligerent President this country ever had."

FORETOLD MANCHURIA WAR

"Our vital interest is to keep the Japanese out of our country, and at the same time to preserve the good will of Japan," Theodore Roosevelt wrote Taft.

"The vital interest of the Japanese, on the other hand, is in Manchuria and Korea. It is, therefore, peculiarly out interest not toke any steps as regards Manchuria which will give the Japanese cause to feel, with or without reason, that we are hostile to them, or a menace—in however slight a degree—to their interests.

"Alliance with China, in view of China's absolute military helplessness, means, of course, not an additional strength to us, but an additional obligation which we assume; and as I utterly disbebelieve in the policy of bluff, in national and international no less than in private affairs, or in any violation of the old frontier maxim, 'never draw unless you mean to shoot,' I do not believe in our taking any position anywhere unless we can make good; and, as regards Manchuria, if the Japanese choose to follow a course of conduct to which we are adverse, we cannot stop it unless we are prepared to go to war, and a successful war about Manchuria would require a fleet as good as that of England, plus an army as good as that of Germany.

"OPEN DOOR" FAILURE

"The 'open door' policy in China was an excellent thing, and will, I hope, be a good thing in the future, so far as it can be maintained by general diplomatic agreement, but as has been proved by the whole history of Manchuria, alike under Russia and Japan, the 'open door' policy, as a matter of fact, completely disappears as soon as a powerful nation determines to disregard it, and is willing to run the risk of war rather than forego its intention.

"How vital Manchura is to Japan, and how impossible that she should submit to much outside interference therein, may be gathered from the fact—which I learned from Kitchener in England last year—that she is laying down triple lines of track from her coast bases to Mukden, as an answer to the duoble tracking of the Siberian railway by the Russians.

"However friendly the superficial relations of Russia and Japan may at any given time become, both natios are accustomed to measure their foreign policy in sections of centuries; and Japan knows perfectly well that sometime in the future, if a good occasion offers, Russia will wish to play a reutra game tof bowls for the prize she lost in their last contest.

"OUR VITAL INTEREST"

"Now on the other hand, whereas our interests in Manchuria are really unimportant, and not such that the American people would be content to run the slightest risk of collision about them, our interest [illegible]ping the Japanese [illegible] our country is vital."

Luckey recom[illegible] the letter to the committee for its "soundest disdom, uttered by on of the great men of American history."

Frederick J. Libby, representing the National Council for Prevention of War, waraned the committee that a war with Japan would only result in turning "Asia Red, while we lost our democracy in Fascism."

He was particularly critical of President Roosevelt's Chicago speech.

"What worries this country," Libby said, "is the degree of significance to give to his words 'concerted effort.'

"To many of us the answer is partiall yembodies in the supplementary naval program which your committee is considering, and in the Hill-Sheppard (antiwar profits) bill—the enabling legislation for the War Department's industrial mobilization plan—which is likely to come before Congress shortly."

Probers Heckle Jackson on His Tax Views

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (INS)—Assistant Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson has no desire to change the constitutional law of the country, he told a Senate judiciary subcommittee today at its hearings on his nomination for U. S. solicitor general.

At the same time he emphatically declared no "blackmail tactics" were used by him as general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau to force taxpayers to pay taxes.

His statements were made in reply to questions by Senator Austin (R) of Vermont, with Senator King (D) of Utah, joining in grilling the young "trust buster" on his governmental and economic views.

"Did you leave private law practice to come here, for the purpose of doing what you could to change our constitutional law?" asked Austin.

"No," replied Jackson.

When Austin said he had reports that Jackson as counsel to the Revenue Bureau had pursued a policy of intimidation against taxpayers, Jackson heatedly denied it.

"Was it your policy to soak the taxpayer first?"

"I did not come here to blackmail citizens of the United States, and I did not need to have the job," exclaimed Jackson angrily.

Japan's Refusal of Naval Data to Be Given Soon

TOKYO, Feb. 10 (INS)—Japan's refusal to furnish information on her naval building plans, requested by the United States, Britain and France today awaited only final approval by Emperor Hirohito and members of his cabinet, before being transmitted to Washington, London and Paris.

Full text of the notes in which Japan will reply to the tri-power request for information are expected to receive final scrutiny and approval tonight. They will be handed to the ambassadors of the three powers tomorrow or Saturday.

At the same time the Japanese reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's protest against alleged mistreatment of American nationals and property in China will be approved and handed to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew.

The virtual certainty that Japan will turn thumbs down on the demands for information about naval building plans made a showdown on the world naval race both imminent and inevitable, in the opinion of informed observers.

Nevertheless, a slight softening of the Japanese attitude was noted in the words of the naval spokesman. Emphasizing he was giving merely his "personal view," he said that Japan apparently would be willing to attend a naval limitation conference under certain conditions.

Japan would be represented at such a parley, he declared, only if the discussions considered limitation from a quantitative, and not qualitative, point of view.

In other words, Japan would insist on discussing only limitation of the number of ships the nations might build, but would refuse to consider limitation of the size and armament of warships.

Rebel 'Germ Plot' Charged

4 Spaniards Seized With Test Tubes

BAYONNE, France, Feb. 10 (AP)—French police studied today what they described as a Spanish insurgent plot to assassinate with microbes Spanish government representatives in France.

The investigation resulted from clues uncovered after questioning Marques Antonio De Portago, who was held on a charge of using a false passport to cross the frontier at Hendaye.

Evidence of smuggling arms into France for the C. S. A. R., Rightist revolutionary organization, also was involved.

Besides the marques, who described himself as a cousin of former King Alfonso, three other Spaniards were in custody: Jesus Martin, Joe Estoriaso and Joaquin Aranas.

British Rush Aid To U.S. Refugees On Yangtze

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10 (INS)—The British gunboat Bee today rushed to Wuhu, Yangtze river port south of Nanking, to aid the gunboat Aphis in evacuating Britons and Americans should necessity arise.

Fears were felt for the safety of foreigners at Wuhu, following Chinese claims that their troops had recaptured the city yesterday in bitter fighting. It was believed Wuhu would become the center of a ferocious battle should the Japanese attempt to wrest it from the Chinese.

Meanwhile, in Shanghai, further terrorism arose when a bomb was thrown into the office of the newspaper Hwa Mei Wan Pao, causing considerable damage.

The paper is published by an American, Hal P. Mills. It is printed in Chinese and owned by Chinese interests, which are alleged by some circles to favor the Japanese.

No one was injured by the bomb, which marked the second time the newspaper office has been attacked in this manner, but Mills, at his request, was given a police guard.

Meanwhile, Chinese circles expressed great anxiety for the safety of Hankow, temporary seat of the Chiang Kai-Shek government, owing to continued arrival of large numbers of Japanese troops and reinforcements in northern Honan and southern Hopei provinces.

Theft of Jap Navy Plans Laid to U. S.

Warship Secrets Demanded in Notes Already Known to 3 Powers

LONDON, Feb. 10 (INS)—The mystery behind the visit to London of Capt. R. E. Ingersoll, chief of the American naval planning board, involves stolen plans outlining the new Japanese naval program, the London publication, The Week, said today.

The magazine stated Ingersoll brought copies of the stolen plans to London, adding that these plans were obtained with great skill late in November by American intelligence agents operating in Tokyo after British agents had failed to obtain them.

Stealing of the plans, according to "The Week," led to the demand by America, Britain and France for official disclosure of the Japanese building program.

MENACE TO BRITAIN

The plans were sent to Washington by the agent who managed to copy them, the magazine said, and Ingersoll came to London to explain the plans to the British admiralty.

Outstanding disclosure, said "The Week," was that Japan planned to build a great number of high speed cruisers larger than those permitted to the United States, Britain and France under the 1936 treaty.

With this weapon Japan could menace Britain's ocean trade in the China Sea and in the Pacific, the publication sadi.

"On the basis of this startling information, the recent requests were addressed to Japan by Britain and the United States (with France joining). A comical situation thus arose, with the two powers firmly asking for official disclosure of information already in their possession to the last detail.

"The Japanese press raged at the requests for information, which everybody in the Japanese admiralty knew was already being studied by the Washington and London admiralties."

Held on Narcotic Charge

Charged with concealing narcotic drugs, Yee Doo was held in $2500 for hearing February 23 by Commissioner Howard W. Robbins in the Federal building today after he pleaded not guilty.

'75 YEARS OF BOSTON LIFE'

Hunt for Hub Baked Beans

John F. Reveals Frisco Quake Aid

Found Famed Food in Baltimore, Former Mayor Relates

By JOHN F. FITZGERALD
(As told to Paul Whelton)

Hardly had I brushed the rose leaves from my desk at City Hall after the inaugural ceremonies than the Good Government Association sharpened its lances against me.

This odorous organization, it is significant, had found neither myself nor my opponent in the primaries, Ed Donovan, fit for consideration, asserting that neither one of us was capable.

Well, I note that the association has finally given up. Its paid hirelings had a good time while it lasted.

The late Edmund Billings was then secretary of the Goo-Goos. He was supposed to be a Democrat and on that supposition Woodrow Wilson afterward made him collector of the port. A smart appointment—maybe! And Billings was ably assisted by Bob Bottomley.

As an illustration of how the Goo-Goos worked, they had accused honest Patrick A. Collins of graft, by which $800,000 overcharge was permitted on the Fenway project. It is amusing to note the ultimate result of the Puritanical distrust of Collins and me.

FOUND CLEAN CITY

A committee of Boston business men hired Lincoln Steffens to come here and make a probe. He had exposed corruption and boss rule in Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis and San Francisco.

When he came on, he lived and worked in a house hired for him in West Cedar street. From there he investigated all over the place, the muckraker supreme who had a keen faculty for ferreting out graft wherever it existed.

Then he sat down to prepare his report and when he presented the first two chapters, his employers gasped. Steffens was fired on the spot.

He had declared in this report that the administration of Boston was clean; that there was no political boss collecting at City Hall and that the city was cleaner of graft than any big municipality in the world.

Some 28 years later, about 1933, he said the same thing in his story of graft in big cities.

BIRTH OF FIN. COM.

Not long after I took office, innuendoes were spread by my political enemies against my administration, and I did then what I still consider the crowning achievement of that administration. I appointed an investigating committee made my political foe, Nathan Mathews, chairman and gave him complete power and money to investigate.

That was the start of the Boston Finance Commission and no other mayor or governor has ever done such an unusual thing.

Not only did I ask that financial people, civic welfare agencies and labor unions get together and suggest members for such a commission, but I threatened to fire any city official who did not open the books of the city to them.

On the first Finance Commission there was only one Fitzgerald man, John J. Kennedy, labor unionist. The others were Chairman Mathews, George F. O. Ernst, George Crocker, John A. Sullivan (who had become my bitter enemy after I took office), Randall Morris and John F. Moors.

SULLIVAN'S ENMITY

Shortly after I took the mayor's chair, Sullivan, who was still serving in Congress, came up to me while I was re-visiting Washington. He said:

"John, I have a chance to become counsel for the Sanitary Disposal Company of St. Louis. If we could get the Boston contract it would mean a lot to me."

"I hope you get it, John," I told him, "but I've got to give it to the low bidder. You're my friend and I'll do everything possible."

When the bids were open, however, his firm was not low bidder and lost the contract. We were enemies from that time.

Meanwhile, Martin Lomasney was yet to become reconciled, the Republicans were bitter, some old-line Democrats were sore, and the Good Government Association was meddling—as usual.

Leaders of the Republican machine, bad losers as a rule, blocked or tried to block every measure I introduced for the benefit of the city.

BOOMED PARK SQUARE

Even George Crocker, treasurer in the Collins regime but whom I had declined to reappoint, was gunning for me.

At that time it was not easy for the mayor to assert himself. There were 75 members of the council and 13 aldermen and if they were not strewing stumbling blocks people on Beacon Hill were.

However, one of the major achievements in which I succeeded was in starting to build up the Park square district. Before that circuses were being shown on the vacant lot that now is a busy center.

It was through my efforts that Arlington street was put through and Pleasant street, now Broadway, was widened. Look at that thriving district now.

One of my most determined blockers, before our reconciliation, was Martin Lomasney himself and although many men of many minds have said many things about the lantern-jawed Mahatma, nobody ever said he lacked courage or a fighting heart.

SAVED WORKERS' JOBS

Martin was then a representative, but he was even more powerful as a friend of Louis A. Frothingham, the Republican he had vainly backed against me for the mayoralty.

In the city service were many of Martin's henchmen, put there by Pat Collins. With the assistance of strange allies, Lomasney put through a bill in the House, making the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation final authority in the matter of firing a civil servant.

This was a palpable ruse. Frothingham controlled the board, which was Republican and entirely anti-Fitzgerald. But I licked the bill in the Senate, with J. J. Mitchell of Marlboro, who later became a congressman, leading the fight for me.

And I did not fire deserving city employes, regardless of their political or factional affiliations.

One of the amusing incidents of that first term as mayor was my fight to allow hotels to serve liquor later than 11 p. m. The 11 o'clock closing for hotel service was ridiculous, as theaters were just letting out at that time and people were just arriving on trains from New York.

AIDED QUAKE SUFFERERS

Governor Curtis Guild aided me in that fight and we succeeded in having the hotel time extended.

And one of my happiest memories is that connected with Boston's part in relieving sufferers of the San Francisco disaster in April 1906. Even as the first horrible reports were being received here, I called a meeting of Boston financiers and business men at a hotel and within an hour they had pledged $100,000 toward relief.

Those present included Joseph H. O'Neil, A. C. Ratshesky, Henry L. Higginson, Andrew Badaracco, P. A. O'Connell, Robert Winsor, William A. Gaston, James J. Storrow, James J. Phelan, William F. Fitzgerald, James Morrison and Frank Webster.

I didn't have to plead with them, and two or three days later we raised another $100,000.

"BOSTON" BAKED BEANS

As a further relief to the San Francisco sufferers, I decided to send a carload of Boston baked beans. But search all over town though I did, I could find only one small concern making them.

I don't believe the San Francisco people who ate those "Boston baked beans" ever knew I had them shipped from Baltimore.

Social duties cut heavily into my time as mayor and it was only rarely that I rolled into bed before early morning. On one occasion John Shepard called me to go to Providence, where he was celebrating the biggest sale of any department store in New England, outside of Boston.

Mr. Rathbun, famous editor of the old Providence Journal, was a guest and at the end of the dinner he said to me:

"Mr. Mayor, can I get you a cigar?"

"Thank you, no," I replied.

RATHBUN'S SURPRISE

"Don't you smoke?" he inquired.

"No, I've never used tobacco."

"And I notice you're not drinking, either."

"No, I'm not a drinking man."

"By the devil," he exclaimed. "All we Republican editors do is picture you Irish politicians with a T. D. pipe in your mouth and a bottle of whiskey under your arm."

That was true in many instances, but I recall that in my office at the time I don't believe I had a drinking man. It wasn't that I favored prohibition, although I favored temperance, but it just happened. For myself, I was a fiend on chocolate. That took the place of alcohol.

Such racial antipathy has been tempered somewhat with the passing years, but not nearly enough.

When I went into City Hall, neither the Italian nor the Jewish element was recognized in outstanding appointments, so I named the leading Italian of the day, Andrew A. Badaracco, and an outstanding Jewish citizen, Samuel F. Borofsky, as principal assessors in posts as department heads.

MEN FROM "SLUMS"

A few years ago Joseph Lee, Jr., now a member of the school committee, in a report on a survey of Boston housing conditions, asserted that "South Boston, for 50 blocks around C and Silver streets, is inhabited by low grade Irish, Poles and Lithuanians" and that this was a slums district.

South Boston citizens were stirred, and rightly so, by his remarks, and may I point out now that many members of my "Brain Trust" back three decades ago came from these same "slums," or tenement districts of the city.

These men came from South Boston: William A. Leahy, secretary during my second term and who, with his brother, the Rev. George Leahy, were the outstanding scholars of all time at Latin school; Thomas A. Mullen, Latin school teacher for 25 years and my schoolhouse commissioner; Jimmy Gallivan, street commissioner who later became a great congressman, and his brother, Dr. William J. Gallivan, director of the division of child hygiene.

OTHER NOTABLES

These came from Charlestown: Supreme Court Judge Arthur Dolan, a secretary in my first term, and Land Court Judge Joseph J. Corbett, corporation counsel in my second.

Harry Sullivan, Boston's famous park commissioner, hailed from Roxbury and was later, after 25 years of service, to be fired by Mayor James M. Curley in an inhuman manner—through a special delivery letter sent to his home and seen by all the family. Sullivan never recovered from the shock.

(In the Boston Evening American tomorrow, when he celebrates his 75th birthday anniversary, will be published another chapter in these interesting memoirs of John F. Fitzgerald covering three-quarters of a century of Boston life.)

Capone 'Faking,' Intimates Hint; Fears Foes

Claim He Plans Own Safety; See Move To Beat State 'Rap'

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 10 — Gangland never forgets.

Al Capone, prohibition millionaire, knows it and he is building a wall against his foes who have marked him for death once he emerges from behind prison walls.

Out of the welter of rumor and report which have found their way from Alcatraz Island, via the grapevine, today came word direct from Scarface's intimates that Capone is building a defense for himself once he is free.

They say he is feigning insanity if not to be transferred from the "Rock" to another institution, then to beat the Illinois "rap" which faces him when he completes his federal sentence several months hence.

COUNSEL GUIDES MOVES

Once his ten-year term is ended, he faces only the detainer of Cook County, where he is confronted by a one year jail sentence for the state misdemeanor of failure to file an income tax return.

Every Capone move, these intimates say, is guided by counsel.

The true state of Capone's condition may not be known until there is an official announcement from Washington.

The two noted psychiatrists, Dr. Edward W. Twitchell and Julian M. Wolfson, who conferred with officials on the "Rock" were back on the mainland today. They declined to discuss their day-long consultation. It was learned, however, that Capone is not so dangerously ill as was first reported.

Prison officials emphatically denied that he had turned suddenly violent and was trussed in a straitjacket after a fierce battle with guards.

Other reports that the gangster's mental breakdown was due to a physical condition brought on by a "fast life," were derided in word from Chicago. There it was said that the presence of a social disease germ would have been manifested when the gangster first was examined by doctors.

SECRET EXAMINATION

Dr. Maurice I. Tir, physician for the Chicago Board of Health, made a complete investigation of the former gang overlord at the county jail on October 25, 1931, after his conviction in federal court.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the health board, however, said the records of Dr. Tir's examination were secret and that he was prevented by law from revealing their nature.

In the records filed at the Cook County jail at the time there appears no indication of disease findings.

36 Burned to Death At Wedding Party

MOSTAR, Yugoslavia, Feb. 10 (AP)—Thirty-six members of a peasant wedding party were burned to death today at the village of Bretnia when the roof of the bridegroom's father's home collapsed and caught fire. The bridegroom was killed, but the bride was rescued.

250 Millions for WPA Demanded by Roosevelt

for the six months ending June 30, 1938. The number of persons on the Works Progress Administration rolls today is 1,950,000."

WPA officials said the sum Roosevelt asked would enable them to give relief to an average of 1,000,000 people during the four and a half month period. Because of heavy winter demands, they added, more than 1,000,000 probably would be added now, with curtailments in the spring.

WPA officials have reported that if additional funds are not forthcoming they planned to prune the rolls to 1,500,000 by the end of the fiscal year. The WPA announced there were 68,479 more persons on federal relief on January 29 than there were a week before.

TEXT OF LETTER

The text of the President's letter to Bankhead follows:

"I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration a supplemental estimate of appropriation of $250,000,000 for relief of the unemployed.

"Emergency and work relief: To continue to provide relief and work relief as authorized in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937, and subject to all the provisions thereof, $250,000,000, which amount shall be added to, and proportionately increase the specified amounts of the limitations prescribed under the appropriation made in such act (50 Stat. 352).

3,000,000 LOSE JOBS

"According to the best estimate available at this time it appears that, during the last three months approximately three million persons have lost their jobs with private employers.

"This increase in unemployment could not, of course, have been foreseen at the time the last relief appropriation was under consideration.

"Hundreds of thousands of needy unemployed persons have recently applied for relief work which could not be provided for them with the funds on hand. It has become increasingly clear that these needs cannot be met unless employment by the Works Progress Administration is increased immediately.

"The funds available on January 7, 1938, would permit employment of an average of only 1,700,000 persons for the six months ending June 30, 1938.

"The number of persons on the Works Progress Administration rolls today is 1,950,000.

WORK FOR 5 MONTHS

"Funds available at this time will not only not take care of the additional burden caused by the recent increase in unemployment but will require a sharp reduction in the near future of the number on the Works Progress Administraion rolls.

"This estimate of $250,000,000 will permit the continued employment for the next five months of the number now on such rolls, and will provide a reasonable measure of relief for those who have recently become unemployed and are in need."

7 Maine Shoe Firms Face NLRB Charges

The National Labor Relations Board today announced it would issue complaints against seven shoe firms in Lewiston and Auburn, Me., for allegedly refusing to bargain collectively with the United Shoe Workers' of America, an affiliate of the CIO. A hearing was set for February 21 in Auburn.

According to the labor relations board, the employes of the seven companies selected the CIO union as their bargaining agent last August following a general strike. The firms were the Somerset Shoe Company, Charles Cushman Company, Lown Shoe Company, Koss Shoe Company, Lown Shoe Company, Remus Shoe Company and Lombard Shoe Company.

Miss Donoghue Ackers' Bride

Dorchester Girl Wed In St. Peter's

On the 35th wedding anniversary of her parents, Miss Mary T. Donoghue of Westville street, Dorchester, was married today to Charles E. Ackers of East Milton in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester.

A nuptial mass, the first public ceremony since the upper church had been remodeled recently, was celebrated by the Rev. Charles Mason.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Donoghue, was attended by her sister, Eileen, matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Margaret and Eleanor Donoghue, cousins.

He's Too Shaky To Shave Them

Barber Seeks $10,000 For Lynn Injury

His hand is so unsteady from neuritis that he is unable to give a good shave to his friend, Mayor Fred J. Manning of Lynn, a 60-year-old Lynn barber testified in federal court today.

Vincent Amorosa of Broad street, Lynn, further testified that he contracted neuritis as a result of injuries suffered the night of December 12, 1936, when he was struck by an automobile while on his way home from his barber shop.

He is suing Stuart Urquhart of North Common street, Lynn, for $10,000 damages.

The barber declared he would be unable to work for some time.

Son Very Ill; Seek Missing Father

Prompted by her son's desperate illness, Mrs. Edward P. Farrell, Appleton street, South End, today asked police aid in locating her husband, missing 10 years.

The son, Gerald, 15, a spinal meningitis patient at City Hospital, calls constantly for his father. The father's last known address was in Washington street, South End.

$198,000 Needed To Complete Fund

Campaign Ends With Victory Dinner In Hotel Bradford Tonight

Greater Boston's Community Fund Campaign entered its final stretch today just $198,000 short of its $4,500,000 goal.

Leverett Saltonstall, general chairman of the campaign, estimated this morning that a total of $4,302,000 had been raised to date. The campaign ends with the victory dinner at 6:30 tonight in the Hotel Bradford, at which time final computation will be made.

"This will be a hard pull," Saltonstall said, "but the goal is attainable if the 15,000 volunteer workers continue their active solicitation during the few remaining hours."

Sentence Mother As Fagin

Accused by police as a "female Fagin," Mrs. Julia Portella of Norwood, 20-year-old mother of one child, was sentenced today in Dedham district court to one year in Dedham jail.

Sentence was imposed after she had pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering the apartment of two Norwood school teachers and stealing property valued at $70.

The young mother appealed the sentence and was held in $2000 for superior court.

In juvenile court at Dedham, the 13-year-old junior high school girl alleged to have been used by Mrs. Portella in the burglary and theft, was ordered sent to Lancaster Industrial School for Girls, but an appeal was entered for her and she was turned over to the custody of her parents.

According to police testimony, the girl was persuaded by the woman to steel the apartment key from the desk of one of the two teachers, and Mrs. Portella then ransacked the apartments while the teachers were in school.

Girl Runaway Big Problem

Refuses Mother's Plea To Return Home

What to do with a 15-year-old Portland girl who, with two other girls ran away to see the bright lights of New York, and refused to go home after capture by state police was the problem that faced officials of the Chardon street home today.

The rebels, Ina Perkins, 15, of Myrtle street and Adeline D. Alfonso of Everett street were lodged in the home after their "romantic adventure" was interrupted by state police of Topsfield barracks.

They were brought to Boston when the Perkins girl flatly refused to go back to Portland with her mother who came to Topsfield for her. Birdera Smith, 17, of Oxford street, went home on the bus with Mrs. Perkins. Parents of Adeline Alfonso will call for her today.

State troopers caught the girls after a chase in the woods off Newburyport Turnpike near Maple street. The trio made the mistake of trying to "thumb" a ride from them.

Railroad Station Burns in Vt. Town

NEWPORT CENTER, Vt., Feb. 10 (AP)—Fire swept through the Canadian Pacific Railway freight and passenger station during the night, ruining the interior of the two-story structure and the effects of Agent W. A. Mitchell, who was in a hospital.

Firemen from Newport City fought the blaze for four hours in a raging blizzard.

Grant Beal New Hearing Delay

On consent of both sides, a hearing on North Carolina's plea to extradite Fred E. Beal, Lawrence-born author and former Communist sympathizer, was continued at the State House today to February 16.

Beal was convicted in 1929 for alleged conspiracy to murder a Gastonia, N. C., police chief who was slain in a labor war. Beal jumped bail on which he was free following an appeal from a 17-to-20-year prison sentence.

Attorney George E. Roewer, representing Beal, made the request for the continuance. Attorney-General A. A. Seawell of North Carolina, who was accompanied by Assistant Attorney General Harry M. McMullan, agreed.

Assistant Attorney General Edward P. Bacigalupo presided during the brief proceedings.

Bills Ask Death For Sex Crimes

Three bills, one of them to establish the death penalty for certain offenses, came before the legislative committee on judiciary today, all of them aimed at increasing the punishment of sex crimes against children.

Senator Charles G. Miles of Brockton filed the death penalty bill, which measure also would increase the maximum penalties for certain types of sex offenses. Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty and Senator Bernard L. Sullivan of Chelsea sponsored two other measures along similar lines.

Girl Scout Official N. Y. Rites Planned

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—Funeral services were today being planned for Mrs. Abbie Church Rickard, 54, national treasurer of the Girl Scouts. She died at a hospital here Tuesday after a brief illness.

Besides her husband, Edgar Rickard, magnate and mining engineer, she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Graham Hoyt of Darien, Ct., and Mrs. Elizabeth P. Mohun of Coconut Grove, Fla.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Hunt Thief Who Used Auger

Police today sought a well-dressed youth with a brief case who missed hundreds of dollars' worth of jewels and personal belongings when Miss Alexina R. LaPointe frightened him from her Mt. Vernon street, Beacon Hill, apartment.

Miss LaPointe said today she had returned home and was making tea in the kitchen when she saw the point of an auger bit boring through a panel in her door. As she called police the bit made three more holes in the door.

A studious-appearing young man smashed the panel and put his hand in to open the lock. When Miss LaPointe screamed the man fled.

G-Men Must Know Their 'Economics'

Do you want to be a G-man?

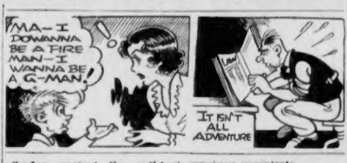
Little boys are now telling their mamas they want to be G-men, instead of firemen, when they grow up, and they've substituted the game of gangster for federal man.

But it's not all adventure, according to W. J. West, chief of the eastern division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with offices in Postoffice square, Boston.

"A boy has to know his economics as thoroughly as the technique of a crack target-shot," West said.

"Being a G-man isn't all capturing desperadoes.

"For example, there is the anti-trust law. To deal with an offender against the anti-trust law, a federal man must know economics."



MA—I DOWANNA BE A FIRE MAN—I WANNA BE A G-MAN!
LAW
IT ISN'T ALL ADVENTURE

Uncle Sam has taken care of this by requiring that all candiadtes for the position of federal policeman be graduates of a law school or experienced accountants.

"G-men are of all physical types," West said. "There are no requirements as to height and weight."

So if junior doesn't grow up to six feet, he needn't be discouraged.

Boy Gives Clue in Lee Murder

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga., Feb. 10 (AP)—Officers studied information today from a 14-year-old boy that Dr. Charles H. Lee conversed with a white man and two Negroes four hours before he was shot to death through a rectory window last Saturday night.

Wiley Tillett, son of Coast Guard Captain E. G. Tillett, testified at a coroner's inquest that he saw the aged rector of Christ Episcopal Church talking with the trio about 7:30 P. M.

The nature of the conversation was not disclosed.

NO NEED OF IT

"I should have taken Father John's Medicine at the start of my cold instead of allowing it to hang on this way. I knew better; I've used it before."

For the past 83 years Father John's Medicine has been used successfully by millions for colds and body building. Its best advertisement is the word-of-mouth endorsement of those who have used it and recommended it to others. It must be good. Now, when colds are prevalent, don't delay taking Father John's Medicine.

Chapter 34

KISSES aren't among the standardized treatments for auto crash victims. But Whit's seemed to work as far as Patsy was concerned.

At any rate, she opened her eyes presently, lids fluttering, and said softly:

"If you'd—let a girl get a little air—I think I might——learn to like—getting knocked out."

"Lovely!" said Whit. He kissed her again. "Can you move all right, darling? Please tell me you're not broken anywhere!"

"Mmm! No. I can move, all right... But—I'm not sure I want to."

"Don't then," said Whit.

A car went past, stopped a little way up the road, turned around, halted near Whit's wrecked machine.

"Hello there," said a cheery voice. "Had an accident?"

"I didn't do it on purpose," replied Whit.

The man in the car laughed.

"No one hurt, I hope?"

"Whit!" said Patsy. "There's a white cross beside his license tag! Doesn't that mean he's a doctor?"

"This young lady," said Whit. "My—this lady—is knocked out. I mean I think she's hurt."

"I see." The owner of the cheery voice revealed himself as a smooth-shaven man with a high forehead and a pleasant smile. "Possibly I can be of help . . . Oh, that's a rather nasty cut . . . Nothing serious, though . . . A little bandage to stop the bleeding". . .

He produced a doctor's bag and, with deft, sure hands, went to work.

* * *

"I WON'T be scarred up, will I?" asked Patsy, fearfully.

"I should hope not," said the doctor, with a physician's appreciation of physical perfection. "No, I don't think so. You had a bump on the head, too, didn't you? We'll need more light for that. Let me see—I happen to be on my way to a hospital now—the J. B. Thomas in Peabody. Perhaps—if it's not out of your way."—

Whit accepted eagerly.

En route to the hospital, the good Samaritan revealed himself as Dr. Harry Freedberg of 2 Chestnut street, Salem.

"A minor concussion, superficial facial cuts," he said, after more detailed examination. "Nothing serious. There's no reason you shouldn't go home, Miss——?"

Patsy said nothing.

"Miss Kelly," Whit said lamely, after a moment. Then hurried out to arrange for a car.

Patsy was silent as Whit helped her into the sleek machine he'd summoned from Goodell, Inc., Salem. When he reached for her hand, she pulled it away.

"What's the matter, lovely?"

"You know," she said. "You know very well."

"But I don't!"

"No," said Patsy, in a broken little voice. "I don't want you to kiss me. Why—why didn't you tell the doctor I was your—your wife? You just introduced me as—Miss Kelly."

Whit laughed—without much conviction. A little shamedly, in fact.

"Patsy lovely," he said. "I'm sorry. I thought you'd get it. You see, Salem's so near Beverly—and my folks—I want to tell them first myself—Oh, don't you understanad, darling?"

Patsy shook her head, indifferent to bandages and caresses alike.

"I don't care about your folks," she said. "You said yourself I wasn't marrying them! . . . Oh, Whit, it would be like that all the time! Wouldn't it?"

"Don't be foolish!" said he. "Of course not. Just until we could get things straightened out—with your folks and mine. And have a church wedding . . . Like you want."

But Patsy wasn't listening.

Patsy Tells of Broken Honeymoon

Patsy, narrowly escaping serious injury in auto accident after her elopement with Whit Prentiss, returns to her home, and finally confides in Sheila that she is married. Sheila starts to scold, but Patsy's accident and welling tears soften the elder girl. "Don't worry, honey," says Sheila. "We'll straighten it out some way." "Oh, Sheila, we just must!" replies Patsy.

"It made me feel terrible, Whit," she said. "It made me feel like a heel. As if you were ashamed of me. Oh, dear, it just changes everything. I don't like it."

* * *

WHIT began to realize she was serious.

"But Patsy, sweetheart," he protested, drawing her to him. "I didn't mean it that way. I was thinking of you, too. Why, I'm proud of you, lovely." He tried to cheer her. "Look, I'll tell the chauffeur. I'll have him stop the car, and tell people on the street. That you're Mrs. Whitney Prentiss. Patsy Prentiss. My Patsy Prentiss. I'll hire a radio station, and broadcast it. I'll wire Walter Winchell"—

Patsy's soft hand over his lips stopped him.

"Shut up!" she said. "I don't wanna be in Winchell's Column," and she broke into the rhythm of the popular song, humming it—forgetting her momentary hurt.

Yet not forgetting it altogether. As Whit learned when he bent forward to give directions to the chauffeur.

"No," said Patsy. "I've changed my mind about that."

"But, lovely"—

"No. Oh, Whit, you don't want me to feel like a heel! When I'm Mrs. Whitney Prentiss, I want to be Mrs. Whitney Prentiss everywhere . . . Or, anyway, that's how I feel tonight."

Whit argued, pleaded, cajoled, grew sulky—all to no avail.

"After all," Patsy pointed out, as a final argument, "maybe it isn't even legal. With us being under age, and everything."

"Well," said Whit, "don't go marrying anyone else under that impression. I'll show you whether it's legal."

Then they both laughed. But no laughter would change Patsy's resolution.

"Besides," she said, clinching it, "I look like a nightmare in these bandages. They'd think you'd beaten me up."

"I should," said Whit. "I feel like it."

Then they were crossing the Broadway bridge, gliding quietly along Dorchester avenue, and Patsy felt safe.

"Goodnight, Mr. Prentiss, darling," she said, offering her lips. "Perhaps, some other night"—

* * *

SHEILA awoke suddenly. She'd fallen asleep in the living room, waiting . . . Well, she might as well go to bed, undress at least . . . She started upstairs . . . Then, a car going away, the click of the doorlatch—Patsy!

"Oh! You're hurt! What happened?"

"Ssh!" Patsy's smile peeped irrepressible from her bandages. "Just a speck of car trouble. Think nothing of it."

"Pat! Don't be idiotic. What happened? Where have you been?" Sheila was both angry and relieved.

"I'm not idiotic! A truck ran into me, and I got kind of scratched up. So would you. Are the folks home?"

"No, they're still at Uncle John's."

"Well, that's a break anyway." Patsy yawned, trying to pass it off. "Whew, I'm all in. What a night!"

"You look it!" said Sheila. "Don't try to get away with that, sweet. But are you sure you aren't hurt, dear . . . Is that a cut on your wrist?"

Too late Patsy remembered. Too late she snatched her left hand away. Sheila had already seen the engagement ring, the thin band of platinum nestling beneath it.

"So that's it! . . . Whit?"

Patsy nodded; ready to sniffle—or fight.

"But when, where? Patsy, tell me all about it. Oh, you crazy child. It's some kind of gag, isn't it?"

Patsy extended her left hand.

"Does that look like a gag?" she inquired, in a dead tone, turning the ring so that the square-cut diamond glittered at a thousand points. ("Quite the choicest set stone I can offer you, Mr. Prentiss," the clerk had said.)

"It's beautiful!" said Sheila. "But, even if it is"—

"It seems to me," interrupted Patsy, the tears close, "that you ought to be congratulating me, Sheil, instead of—putting me through a third degree. Especially when I—I might just as well have been killed. Or—something."

Sheila gathered her into sisterly arms, kissed her.

"I'm a mean old hen, baby. I do congratulate you. And now—tell me all about it."

Patsy told—covering the high spots, at least. Sheila nodding now and then.

"Yes, darling," she said, when Patsy was through. "But there's one thing you haven't made clear. Let's not be silly. It's important. Have you—lived with him?"

Patsy burst into tears.

"N—no," she said. "That darned truck!"

Sheila breathed easier.

"Then, honey, there isn't so much to worry about," she said. "We'll straighten it out some way."

"Oh, Sheila," said Patsy, her eyes luminous. "We just must. He's grand."

* * *

BIG Gus Mornick was ready, entirely ready.

"Let's have a talk with that lug Stout," he ordered.

Vince Barton, reluctantly leaving his racing charts, responded.

Partly because it suited his plans—partly because it fell in with his macabre sense of humor—Big Gus had contrived to keep Vince captive without Vince being well aware of it.

It wasn't so difficult. Fortunately for his purpose, Vince hadn't penetrated Greefy's disguise, even when the gunman fired on him.

And it was easy for Big Gus to convince the crooner that Greefy was only one agent of a gang that was thirsting for his, Vince's blood. Because he'd been the sole witness of the Cole murder.

"If I was you," Big Gus had said, assuming the role of benevolent philanthropist, "I'd case up right here till the heat's off. Maybe I can help cool things down. I don't mix with none of that rough stuff, but I got some weight with these hoods, on account of doin' them favors."

Vince hadn't been hard to persuade—especially when he learned that he could place unlimited horse-bets on credit, that he had excellent quarters at his disposal, and that Big Gus was a discriminating judge of high-class crooning.

But it was time now, as Big Gus saw it, to fit Vince—whom he still knew only as Morgan Stout—into his murder plans.

The racket boss began by pointing out to Vince that he was $12,000 on the cuff.

"I thought we were pals," said Vince, slightly hurt. "But if you feel that way about it, I've got a nag in the seventh today at Hialeah that's sure to come in. I'm laying you five G's on his nose right now."

"Not on the cuff," said Big Gus. "But I'll tell you what I'll do. That goat couldn't win a push-cart derby. I'll bet you the twelve grand you're in me against your clothes that your nag don't deliver!"

"The clothes I'm wearing?"

"Yeah. With what's in 'em."

"I don't know wha' kind of a rib this," said Vince, his voice trembling with excitement, "but you're on."

"Okay," said Big Gus, imperturbably. "Let's have the rags. I know where there's a suit will fit you." Then, as Vince demurred—"Oh, no. This here's one bet that don't go on the cuff. You got to lay it on the line—the whole works—kicks to skinner. Right now. Or—kick in with that twelve grand."

"Don't make me laugh, Mr Mornick," said Vince. "Show me this other suit."

The racket boss chuckled.

"Don't Mister me, Morgan," he said. "Call me Gus. We're pals. I'll call you Morg. That's a swell monicker, Morg."

Big Gus likes his murders with a good, hearty laugh. But Vince probably would be less amused if he knew his clothes were going on a prospective murder victim. Particularly a victim whose murder Big Gus plans to "pin" on Mickey — Vince's brother-in-law. A relationship, incidentally, that Big Gus has overlooked. Yet it falls right in with his plot, as it dramatically unfolds in tomorrow's chapter of this fast-moving all-Boston novel. You'll find this story every day in all editions of the Boston Evening American.

Although some old Boston and Beacon Hill names are used in this story for purely fictitious characters, they refer to no actual persons.

What Has Gone Before

GENUINE, decent, lovely. That's Sheila Kelly, of South Boston, heroine of this novel, as she trips down the steps of the State House into a maelstrom of adventure and romance.

Typical of the best in Boston is the Kelly family—former Sgt. Bernard F. Kelly, police strike veteran; his devoted wife, Moira; their children, Sheila, Patricia, Michael, Delphine (Patsy, Mickey, and Del.)

Sheila is a temporary State House employe when the story opens. So far, the only man to stir her heart has been Gerald (Jerry) O'Donovan, of Roxbury, former B. C. football star, and rising figure in Boston politics.

Accident brings her into contact with Bradford Cabot Talton, Beacon street, Harvard, and Social Register. Though she does not encourage his attentions, Jerry grows jealous, and she drops the Harvard youth.

But chance brings them together again, and Sheila finds herself swayed by Brad's charm—even though she rejects his proposal of marriage.

A sinister element enters the affairs of the Kelly family when Big Gus Mornick, Boston racket boss, seeks to obtain possession of a coded police report on racketeering, which Sheila has typed.

His fury turns against Jerry O'Donovan when Jerry, campaigning successfully for city council, promises to clean up the rackets—number pool, bookmaking, and so on.

Meanwhile, Vince Barton, of Jamaica Plain, Delphine's crooning husband, blunders into Mornick's net by being among the innocent bystanders when Greefy Koopman, a Mornick gunman, commits a racket murder.

Mornick learns of Jerry's devotion to Sheila, plots to frame her brother, Mickey, on a "murder rap." Rather than see Mickey go to the chair, he believes Sheila will induce Jerry to cease his anti-racket campaign.

Mornick orders Greefy to find a victim for the faked murder, and Greefy returns with Vince, whom he has recognised as a witness of the gang slaying. But Big Gus, who "goes big for crooners," won't permit Vince to be killed. However, he holds the crooner prisoner.

Like a gayer echo of Sheila's love complications is the romance of her 17-year-old sister Patsy with Whit Prentiss, Brad's Harvard roommate. It reaches a climax when Whit proposes during a party at the Prentiss' Beverly estate, while his parents are in Bermuda. Patsy accepts. As they are both under age and fear parental opposition, Whit urges an elopement.

Brad has been arrested for speeding while driving Sheila to Boston from the Dover estate of his socialite sister, Mrs. Trudy Wendell. After Sheila again rejects him, he quarrels with his father, the wealthy and politically-powerful Cabot Talton. Sulking, the Talton scion vanishes from Harvard, and is missing for months. Then a newspaper dispatch brings news he has crashed while flying as a "barnstormer" in Texas.

His memory has been affected by his injuries, and his sister persuades Sheila to meet him when he is brought back by hospital plane. Brad recognises her, and is overjoyed. But Sheila is furious when his father coolly tells her he expects her to "remain" with Brad, adding that she may "name her own compensation." Brad, thanks to Sheila, recovers his memory, and Sheila is reconciled with Jerry O'Donovan.

Patsy elopes to Nashua, N. H., with Whit. As they are returning to Boston a careening truck forces their car into the ditch.

The Story All Boston Is Talking About

The Brighter Side

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Among the curious journalistic traditions of New York city, is the belief that the mortal remains of a character by the name of "Bo" Weinberg lie in the depths of the North river encased in a neat coffin of concrete.

Damon Runyon

This concrete is presumably supposed to hold "Bo" down in the somewhat remote event that he might one day feel disposed to come forth and haunt somebody.

We have read this statement of the concrete coffin not once, but 50 times in the big town public prints. It has apparently come to be accepted as a fact in the newspaper offices, and we judge that no city editor has yet thought to put his finger on the assertion, and say to a reporter:

"How do you know?"

REPORTORIAL STYMIE

We are inclined to think that this question would prove a severe reportorial stymie. We admit that the concrete coffin lends a picturesque touch of a tale, but the very physical reasons that militate against it, incline us to doubt it.

Only recently the tradition was revived in the New York papers by the apprehension of one "Dixie" Davis, a glib young latitat, or lawyer, who was the legal representative of the late "Dutch" Schultz, once overlord of the numbers business, and other illegal dodges in New York.

With Davis when he was picked up was one George Weinberg, said to be a brother of "Bo," and mention of "Bo" naturally brought in the tradition as to his last resting place.

It is quite likely that "Bo" is dead, all right, as he has not been seen around in some years, and "Bo" was a fellow of the type who would be seen around if he had life and liberty, because he was much given to the pursuit of happiness.

SPENDER AND MIXER

His idea of happiness was the atmosphere of the night clubs. He was associated with the redoubtable Schultz quite early in the "Dutchman's" career in the beer business during the prohibition era, but he did not make personal pals of the other members of the Schultz mob.

He hung out along Broadway, and his associates were mainly Broadway characters. He was considered plenty tough, but he had some personality and was a big spender and a good mixer.

The survivors of the underworld that flourished in Weinberg's time think if he had lived he would have kept Schultz out of a lot of the trouble that eventually led to the wiping out of the "Dutchman." Weinberg had a better noodle than Schultz in many ways.

"Bo's" sudden disappearance from his accustomed haunts caused a lot of speculation in the underworld, and the Broadway night clubs at the time.

About that same period it got to be common talk that mob killers were disposing of their victims by coating them with concrete and dropping them in the river, and presently this ingloriuous fate was also assigned to "Bo."

THAT'S THEIR STORY

Naturally, no one professed to have any definite knowledge of the matter, and no concrete coffins with the grisly contents have ever been recovered, as far as we know, nor did we ever hear of anyone who claimed to have seen an exhibit of this nature.

But that was the story, and newspaper tradition is apparently going to stick to it.

As a matter of fact, there is a faint possibility "Bo" still lives, though the general belief of all those who knew, is that he was quietly effaced by some of his own mob for one or more of the many reasons that mobs used to think up for the effacement of fellow members, one being that an individual may have developed too much personality.

If the "Dutchman" knew what happened to "Bo," which is quite likely, he probably never mentioned it publicly. If he had anything to do with the happening himself, he would have felt some natural reticence about speaking of it, and if he did not have anything to do with it, a sense of embarassment over being unable to prevent it happening, would have kept him silent.

SHOW THE HANDLES

We never deemed the theory of the concrete coffin tenable for the reason that the mixing and shaping of the concrete, and the cartage to the river, involved more detail than the mob killers of "Bo's" time worked into their sanguinary efforts.

They usually just knocked 'em over, and let 'em lay, and "Bo" was scarcely of a prominence or importance that warranted any unusual trimmings.

We do not like to spoil a good story, but if "Bo" Weinberg is in a concrete coffin, they will have to show up at least the handles on the coffin before we are going to believe it.

Elsa Puts N. Y. Society on Ice

Many Take a Fall At Maxwell Party

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (INS)—Elsa Maxwell, society's court Jester, today had put the skids under some Astors, Harrimans and even Rockefellers.

The scene of Miss Maxwell's latest party (bizarre parties are her business) was the Radio City outdoor skating rink, and the people you generally find in Park avenue drawing rooms or at Broadway first nights took a fling and an occasional fall, on skates.

Among leaders of local and international society who followed Miss Maxwell's portly leadership onto the flood-lighted ice were Winthrop Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. Averill Harriman, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Baron and Baroness Kurt Pantz, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, III, Cecil Beaton, and the Count and Countess Jean De Polignac of Paris.

Lecture at Architectural Club Attracts Many

By BETTY ALDEN

A HALF a dozen times each winter Beacon Hill aristocrats gather in the picturesque Architectural Club on Somerset street to enjoy a cup of after dinner coffee and a lecture on art, architecture, archaeology or some other subject typical of the cultural interests which have made Boston famous for generations . . .

CELINA ROBBINS

The Architectural Club itself, a modest three story building standing in the shadow of the towering court house, now being constructed, is also typical of old Boston . . .

On the top floor is an atelier such as one would find in Greenwich Village or Montmartre . . . where students of architecture can sketch and study under the direction of the city's leading architects who drop in from time to time . . .

On the second floor is the comfortable library where Mrs. William Tudor Gardiner poured coffee at last evening's affair . . . There was a buzz of pleasant conversation as she and Miss Aimee Lamb, another hostess, greeted their friends and made sure that everything ran smoothly . . .

Mrs. Gardiner wore a becoming costume which combined a delicate silver blouse with a sweeping skirt of black satin . . . Mr. Gardiner was also present along with other such prominent men as Dr. H. Daland Chandler, Charles Maginnis and Charles G. Loring . . .

Aimee Lamb, who was accompanied by her sister, Rosamond, and their mother, Mrs. Horatio Lamb, wore a becoming gown of royal blue moire with cerise flowers at the waistline and a cape of fluffy blue maribou around her shoulders . . .

* * *

Mrs. Butler Ames in White Lace Gown

AFTER COFFEE everyone went downstairs to the auditorium where Professor Leicester B. Holland, gave an interesting lecture on the interrelations of the arts . . . Professor Holland is well qualified to give an entertaining and instructive program for he is chief of the division of fine arts at the Congressional Library in Washington, as well as a professor of architecture at the University of Pennsylvania . . . His talk was illustrated with slides . . .

Among the interested listeners was Mrs. Butler Ames, whose beautiful white lace gown was enhanced with a coral necklace and earrings which just matched her long dramatic cloak of coral broadcloth . . .

Mrs. Richard Sears, wearing a gown of amethyst chiffon over a pastel print, was accompanied by her daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who wore long, dangling gold earrings with her low cut black velvet gown . .

Miss Lydia Evans' black gown had a bright bodice of turquoise blue and Miss Elsie Smead, who wore a cerise chiffon gown trimmed with pale blue flowers, was escorted by Richard Fowle of the Harvard Business School and Winthrop Parker . . .

Mrs. Barrett Wendell was another in the aristocratic audience as were Mrs. Charles Collens and Miss Alice Stackpole in a gown of wisteria color lace . . .

The Architectural Club will be host at an interesting exhibit on February 15 . . . when girls who are studying various forms of art at six different schools in Greater Boston will display their works at a sort of open house . . . Mrs. Charles Greely Loring, Mrs. T. Mott Shaw, Mrs. Gordon Allen and Mrs. Harold Walker will be hostesses on that occasion . . .

Celina Robbins to Wed Edmund Kellogg

THERE IS WIDESPREAD SOCIAL INTEREST in the engagement of Miss Celina Robbins, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bradford Robbins of Marlborough street, to Edmund Kellogg of Morristown, N. J., which was announced last evening by the prospective bride's parents . . .

Miss Robbins is a sister of Chandler Robbins, 2d, who chose a bride from Morristown, N. J., nearly two years ago . . . she was Miss Sarah Fraser . . .

Miss Robbins, who was educated at the Winsor School as well as at the Chateau Brillamont in Switzerland, is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . she made her debut in the 1935-36 season . . .

She is a niece of Mrs. Chandler Robbins of Weston and a cousin of Laura Robbins, and the latter's brothers, Joseph and Chandler Robbins . . . Henry B. and Peter G. Robbins are her brothers . . .

Mr. Kellogg is the son of Mrs. Frederic Rogers Kellogg of Morristown and Dark Harbor, Maine, and the late Mr. Kellogg . . . He prepared for college at Groton School and graduated from Princeton in 1934 and from the Harvard Law School last June . . .

He is a member of the Colonial Club, the Downtown Association, and like most young socialites is an ardent skier . . . He belongs to the Schussverin and the Amateur Ski Clubs of New York . . .

The sub deb daughters of Mrs. Edward M. Guild of Warren street, Brookline, were hostesses at a novel party yesterday afternoon which took place at the Boston Skating Club . . . The guests, about 30 in all, were invited to bring their skates, and after a few glides around the ice and a number of exhibition numbers, refreshments and tea were served . . . Mrs. Guild's daughters are the Misses Nancy, Sally and Betsy Nichols . . .

Wentworth-Campbell Bridal in Newtonville

Miss Elizabeth Cary Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Campbell of Beaumont avenue, Newtonville, was married last evening to Vincent Ellis Wentworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wentworth of Woodland road, Newtonville.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Randolph Miller in the Central Congregational Church, Newtonville, and was followed by a reception at the Campbell home.

IN BRIDAL PARTY

The bride chose a beautiful gown of white faille, made on princess lines and clouded with a filmy tulle veil which fell from a cap of old family lace. She carried lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Miss Louise Ganteaume, the maid of honor, wore a gown of turquoise blue taffeta made with puff sleeves and trimmed with shirred bands of turquoise velvet edging the sleeves, neckline and hem. A coronet of matching velvet bows and an arm bouquet of spring flowers completed her costume.

The bridesmaids were Barbara Ganteaume, Alma Warner, Virginia Sumner and Jean Beach. Their gowns were made of wood rose taffeta in the same style as the maid of honor's with rose coronets in their hair and bouquets of spring flowers.

The bride's mother chose a gown of soft gray lace and Mrs. Wentworth was gowned in rose lace.

BERMUDA HONEYMOON

The bridal couple will go to Bermuda for their honeymoon and after March 1 will be at home at 1919 Commonwealth avenue.

The bride attended Wellesley College where she was a member of the class of 1937 and the bridegroom graduated from Dartmouth in 1936.

Miltonites Plan 'Home Talent' Musical

Mrs. Edward Hamlin (Rose L. Bryant) of West Cedar street, who has appeared in several Vincent Club theatrical productions, is rehearsing the leading feminine role in "Captain Moonlight," the completely "home talent" musical comedy to be presented at the Milton Club on Friday and Saturday evenings, March 4 and 5.

Alanson H. Sturgis of Milton and Bowen Barker of Weston have not only written the music and book of the show, but Mr. Sturgis is the coach, with the help of Weston Howland, and Mr. Barker is directing the orchestra.

Stars of former Junior League theatricals have been recruited to take other leading parts. Among them are the Misses Sarah and Susan Bradlee, who have not only tread the boards in Junior League and Footlight Club shows, but have taken their turn at directing and coaching amateur theatricals.

Ladies of the chorus will include Mrs. Allen Potter, Mrs. Thomas Wales, Mrs. Knight Ames, Miss Cora Peabody, Anne and Jane Donald, Elizabeth Johnson, Elizabeth Eaton, Frances Cutter, Merritt Howland, Mrs. Newton P. Darling, Marjorie Saltonstall, Mrs. Oscar W. Hausserman, Mrs. G. Philip Grabfield and many others.

In the gentlemen's chorus will be such well known Miltonites as Dr. Alexander Forbes, James Bourne Ayer, Jr., Knight Ames, Frank Crocker, Robert Knowles, Newton P. Darling, Wingate Rollins and others.

Gay Valentine Fetes Planned By Clubs

Junior Philomatheia, Dancers' Groups To Entertain

Numerous dinner parties are preceding the young-set's Valentine dances.

Junior Philomatheians are entertaining their friends with a soiree at the chalet tomorrow evening while the Dancers' Club is inviting everyone to a "Lonely Hearts" ball at the Brunswick.

Ruth Rogers of Arlington is having a large dinner party at her home before bringing her guests on to the Philomatheia party, while Mary Melanson of Malden will entertain a large group of Regis College classmates and their escorts at a buffet supper.

LOIS McCARTHY ENTERTAINS

Many out-of-town guests will attend Lois McCarthy's dinner at her home in Somerville, while Josephine Weston of Needham is giving a large cocktail party.

Elizabeth Chisholm and Virginia Fouhy will be hostesses at a dinner party at their Belmont homes.

Among those who have made reservations for the merry party are Helen Bulger, Grace Wright, Catherine MacEachern, Mary Finucane, Flora Murphy, Mavis McGrath and Rose Dooley.

DANCERS' CLUB PROGRAM

With a candid camera contest and solos by Marie Timmons, star of Proparvulis Club, "The Firefly" furnishing the evening's highlight, the Dancers' Club frolic tomorrow night should be one of the season's most successful affairs.

Among those who'll make merry in the Brunswick Casino setting are Mr. and Mrs. E. Carpem Farmer, Dorothy Grimes, Win Patterson, Virginia Amesworth, Mary Driscoll, Mariam Hicks, Ita McCarthy, Susan Ann Thayer, Phyllis Jones, John Briggs and James Duggan.

Cushman Series Of Lectures

Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., and Mrs. Charles E. Bacon are among members of the executive board of the Charlotte Cushman Club who are sponsoring the annual series of lectures at the clubhouse on Marlborough street.

Miss Dorothy Speare will discuss Hollywood and the theatrical world at the first lecture on Thursday morning, February 24. As usual, coffee and doughnuts will be served before the lecture, which begins at 11 o'clock.

Other members of the Cushman Club board sponsoring the lecture are Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. Edwin Sherrill Dodge, Samuel P. Endicott, Dr. William Marlow, Jr., Mrs. Lyman P. Gutterson, William M. Blott, Mrs. Charles Butler, James B. Noyes, Mrs. Charles A. Innes, Mrs. Harold Russell, Rebekah Hobbs, Mrs. Ieland Powers, Mrs. William Morton Wheeler and Mrs. Daniel DeMenocal.

Plans Tea

Polly McCoole, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Joseph McCoole of Dedham, is taking an active part in arranging the Ace of Clubs' fashion show and tea, highlight of the club's meeting Monday afternoon in the Balinese Room of the Hotel Somerset.

Film to Benefit Building Fund Of Church

A special showing of "The Miracle of Lourdes" Friday evening will benefit the building fund of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Jamaica Plain. The film will be shown in the Old Church, Brookside avenue. A special matinee for children will be held at four o'clock in the afternoon.

Mrs. G. Frank McDonald, chairman of the committee, is being assisted by an active corps of workers, Mrs. John Welch, Mrs. Arthur Kelley, Mrs. William Kenney, Mrs. Roger A. Devenery and Mrs. J. Lester Killian.

Some efficient ushering will be done by a corps of attractive young-setters, Emma Timmons, Lillian Drum, Lillian Curley, Mary Raftery, Mabel Luemer, Mary McLaughlin, Anne O'Brien, Catherine Downey and Mary Keenan.

Other energetic parishioners serving on the committee include Mrs. Kay Sullivan Galeota, Mary Keenan, Mary Manning, Mrs. Thomas Kelley, Mrs. Charles Earley, Mrs. Anthony Columbo and Mrs. Martin Deveney.

Bridge Party Aids Salvation Army

Mrs. Bradbury F. Cushing and Mrs. Charles E. Hurley will head the pourers at a bridge tea on February 16 at the Hotel Statler. The party is being arranged to benefit the maintenance fund of the Salvation Army Evangeline Booth Home and Hospital.

Neponset Group Sponsors Tea, Musicale

Court St. Ann Event Will Be Held Sunday

A tidal wave of pre-Lenten festivities and Valentine celebrations has deluged the town.

Whether an alumnae group, a civic organization or a charity-minded club is your pet hobby—chances are that your date book will be a pretty cluttered affair for the next fortnight.

TEA AT COLLEGE CLUB

Court St. Ann of Neponset, C. D. A., adds its name to the long list of organizations arranging informal get-togethers. It's holding a musicale and tea Sunday afternoon at the College Club, 40 Commonwealth avenue.

Hostesses for the day include Mary A. Healey and Rita Brogan, while the past regents of the court, Mrs. Marie Lynch, Mrs. Lucy S. Weafer, Kathryn Healey and Mary Walker are acting as pourers.

An attractive group assisting at tea includes Agnes Callahan, Marguerite Atchison, Mary Evans, Margaret DeWire, Mary Casey and Eleanor Murray.

PLAN MUSICALE

The day's musical program has been planned by Mrs. Grace Devoie, and Mrs. Marguerite Holbrow, while Lillian Dryer, Katherine Sennot, Agnes Sweeney, Margaret Evans, Mildred Kittredge and Mary Histen comprise the usher group.

Grand regent of the court, Isabel Kittredge, heads the reception committee. Serving with her are Nora Donahue, Mary Vaughan, Rita Friday, Mrs. Winifred McNamara, Mrs. Mary Hemingway and Mary McCracken.

Helen Roberts To Wed

The hearts and lacy frills of Valentine Day celebrations are appropriate decorations for the numerous parties being held in honor of the season's brides-elect.

Red and white carnations formed the centerpiece at the buffet supper which Mr. and Mrs. John George Roberts of West Roxbury gave recently at their home to announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen, to Edgar L. Deslauriers of Boston.

Honoring the bride-elect were many members of the Junior Philomatheia and Windsor Clubs. Among them were Louise Connolly, Marion Connell, Dorothy Davis, Dorothy Lannon, Sally Beck, Mary Malloy and Mary Messitt.

Betty Antonucci, who will be bridesmaid at the future nuptials, was among those attending. Others on hand were Nancy Maguire, Josephine Weston, Geraldine Tuohey and Nancy Maguire.

Delightful, New Ways to Serve Shrimps

By MARTHA LEE

We've written before about the wonderful work that has been done by the canning industry to make canned shrimp available to the homemaker. Although sizes of these canned shrimp vary for different usages, a stock on the pantry shelf solves many a snack problem.

We do not imply that this food is limited in any way to snack suggestions because it is equally valuable in all menu planning. We've collected a number of recipes for this pantry staple recently far more quickly and easily prepared than the resulting deliciousness would indicate.

Suggestions are given for the use of canned shrimp as the dinner entree, luncheon dish or the midnight snack.

We know they'll prove helpful in the event someone drops in unexpectedly or you're late arriving home from that afternoon bridge club.

Just make it a rule to put the item on the market list when a can or two have been used.

FRIED SHRIMP

1 can wet pack shrimp
Dash of black pepper
1 egg
Flour

Empty the contents of the can in a colander so that the brine will drain off freely. Use black pepper to suit taste. Sprinkle shrimp with flour, then dip each one in beaten egg separately, then in cracker meal. Fry in deep, very hot fat until a golden brown. This will take less than one minute. Drain shrimp on paper towels to absorb excess fat. Serve garnished with parsley or cress and lemon slices.

SHRIMP BALLS

1 can shrimp, chopped fine
½ cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup tomatoes
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoonful browned flour
5 to 6 tomatoes (equivalent in canned tomatoes may be used)
¼ teaspoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon minced parsley

Combine soft bread crumbs, ½ cup tomatoes, salt, pepper and egg. Roll into balls and fry in butter. Then add remaining ingredients and cook for about 30 minutes, simmering.

BISQUE OF SHRIMP

2 ozs. rice
1½ pints milk
1 large can shrimp
6 tablespoons butter
1 pint (2 cups) water
½ pt. cream
Salt, nutmeg, cayenne and pepper to taste.

Cook rice in milk until soft and mushy. Rub it through a fine sieve. Simmer shrimp in ½ of butter then add water and the strained rice and milk. Let boil for 10 minutes. Then add cream, seasoning and remainder of butter. A half cup of cooked whole rice may be added if desired. Serve with croutons.

Needless Worry

GROWING girls should not worry about their figures. During growth one may get taller for a period, then growing may pause and the spreading-out process takes place.

With a nourishing diet, plenty of vigorous exercise in the open air and nine hours of sleep every night, development should be normal.

Mumps Highly Contagious

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Mumps is something more than a laughing matter. It is an acute infectious disease with the familiar inflammation and swelling of the parotid gland.

Though a common affliction of children, an amazing number of adults suffer from it.

The parotid gland is located on the side of the face, under the jaw, and just below the lobe of the ear. When infected it becomes swollen and painful. The doctors call the ailment "parotitis"

Although the disease has been known for centuries, the actual cause is still undiscovered. It is probably due to a "filterable virus." By this I mean that the causative germ or organism is so small that it cannot be seen even with the aid of the most powerful microscope.

The disease is most common in school children, among whom it is likely to appear in epidemic form. It flourishes in crowded places, such as schools, barracks and aboard ships. During the World War many soldiers had mumps.

NOT TRIVIAL

It is most likely to occur in children between the ages of five and 15. Although it rarely attacks infants, it has been known to appear in old age. It must never be accepted as a trivial disorder, because the infection may lead to serious complications.

The victim first notices a slight but painful swelling in front of one or both ears. This rapidly increases until the entire face becomes swollen out of all normal proportions. Headache, general discomfort, fever and chilliness may be noticed before the swelling appears.

The swelling is firm, elastic and painful to pressure. Even the eyelids may become swollen. The pain is made worse by every movement of the jaw.

Do not regard it as a trivial thing. The disease is highly contagious and therefore the young patient must be kept apart from other children. It is best to keep him in bed, especially if fever is present. Activity can be resumed after the fever has disappeared and the swelling decreases.

The old-fashioned idea of wrapping a piece of cotton or flannel around the face is quite all right but cold compresses are more likely to promote the comfort. An alkaline mouth wash twice a day is helpful. Your doctor will prescribe the necessary medicine.

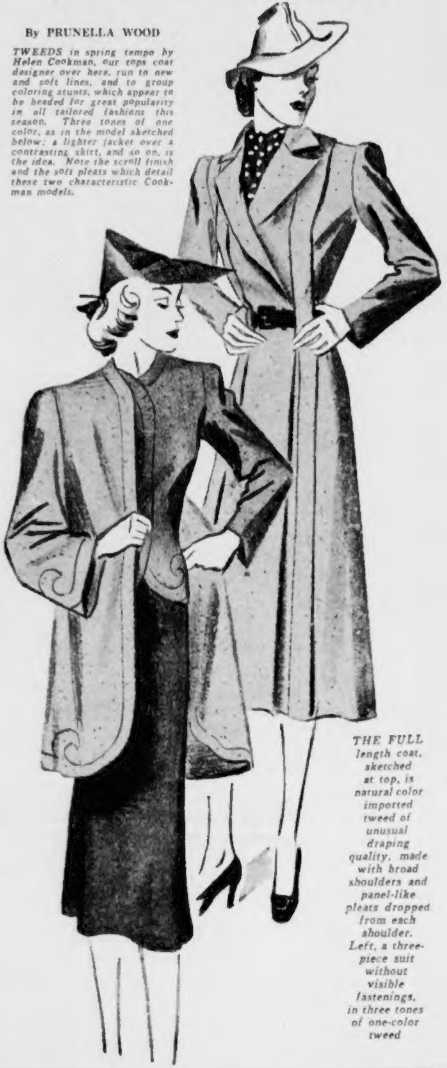
TWEEDS in spring tempo by Helen Cookman, our tops coat designer over here, run to new and soft lines, and to group coloring stunts, which appear to be headed for great popularity in all tailored fashions this season. Three tones of one color, as in the model sketched below; a lighter jacket over a contrasting skirt, and so on, is the idea. Note the scroll finish and the soft pleats which detail these two characteristic Cookman models.



THE FULL length coat, sketched at top, is natural color imported tweed of unusual draping quality, made with broad shoulders and panel-like pleats dropped from each shoulder. Left, a three-piece suit without visible fastenings, in three tones of one-color tweed

Squandered Honors Costly To Reckless Players

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Thousands upon thousands of points are lost every day because partners insist on squandering two honors on the same trick.

At times it is very difficult to avoid this pitfall but, in a hand such as the one described below, this particular type error is inexcusable.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

	North
	♠ A K 6 3 2 ♡ K 10 9 5 ◇ J ♣ K 10 7
♠ Q J 4 ♡ J 7 3 ◇ A 10 4 ♣ A J 9 5	West — East	♠ 10 8 7 5 ♡ A ◇ K Q 6 5 2 ♣ 8 4 2
	South
	♠ 9 ♡ Q 8 6 4 2 ◇ 9 8 7 3 ♣ Q 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is not held up as perfect by any means. North's opening bid was, of course, correct, as was East's pass. South's notrump was questionable. He did not have enough to bid two hearts over one spade but, that being so, it is doubtful that he should have kept the bidding open at all.

West's double was decidedly shaded, even in match-point duplicate. North had an opportunity to save the partnership, by bidding two hearts over the double; his pass put entirely too great a burden on South.

East was quite correct in his business pass to the double. With his holding there was not much chance to "go anywhere" himself but a decided chance that the enemy could be defeated. South was afraid to jump from the frying pan into the fire and, therefore, stuck to the notrump rather than experiment with two hearts—an illogical decision, in my opinion.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE

West opened his fourth best club. Dummy's ten was played and, when it held, a low heart was led from dummy. East won, and made the fatal error of laying down the diamond King. His object, of course, was to smother dummy's Jack so that if declarer had the Ace and West the ten the declarer would not get two tricks in the suit. Unfortunately West's view was shortsighted. The diamond King held, but the diamond suit was then irrevocably blocked.

Had East placed due importance on West's original double, it would have become manifest that the diamond Ace must be in West's hand—not in declarer's. West's double was light enough, even with the diamond Ace; without it, it would have been horrible.

The obviously correct return for East after winning the heart Ace was his fourth-best diamond. West's Ace and ten would have won and the third round could have been overtaken by East in order to run the suit.

It would have made a vast difference in the match-point score if the defenders had capitalized their opportunity to defeat the contract 100 points, instead of presenting declarer with an extra trick.

Wave Grooming

WHEN grooming a finger wave, use a narrow comb with fine teeth. If the hair is dry, pass the teeth of the comb over the palm of the hand over whcih a few drops of brilliantine have been spread. Comb the wave straight out from the head the full length of the hair shafts, then push the strands forward, pinch the lines with the fingers.

Eyes Require Attention

A horrid trail of beauty griefs follows eyestrain. Surrounding tissues soften, take on fine lines. The nervous system protests. There is a feeling of irritation. Sties may appear and nothing makes a face look as "seedy" as a swollen red point on the eyelid.

Men who know say there is a close bond between the eyes and the brain, that one whose vision is poor isn't as able to concentrate as the one whose orbs function normally. Their judgment isn't as good.

Typists and desk workers use their eyes to the limit of their strength all day long. Once a year they should have an examination, find out if soul windows need help.

* * *

WHEN a woman finds that she has a case of alopecia areata, she realizes that, compared with this affliction, most beauty griefs are minor troubles. Almost overnight bald spots appear upon her troubled head. They may be the size of a dime or a dollar. There may be one or many.

Children and young persons suffer from this unsightly condition more than do individuals who are old or middle-aged. What causes it is not definitely established, though it is believed that it is the work of some parasite.

Within six weeks or two months a soft, downy growth will appear to fill in the blank spaces. There is rejoicing, but it is premature. The little fuzzers fluff away. In a short time the permanent growth comes along. The first downy hairs are often gray; the secondary growth is the virgin color.

Treatment consists of the use of the ultra violet ray, applications of antiseptic ointments, daily friction. A medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp should be consulted. Home treatment is not often successful.

Right Posture Necessary for Beauty

IF you should commission Mrs. Raymond Ives, fashion editor of a woman's magazine to do your shopping for you, her first consideration would be your figure.

She would want to know whether you are tall and thin—short and just a bit plump, or large or tiny.

Her suggestions on fashions for different types of figures are so helpful that I am passing them along to you. When you shop, keep these suggestions in mind and you will be better pleased with your purchases.

For the tall, thin girl, Mrs. Ives would buy most of the things that she would not buy for the short, stout girl. The tall girl wears with dash choker beads, collars, scarves and furs that make the short girl appear shorter and stouter. Also, she looks especially well in the splashy prints and droopy brimmed hats that are fashion risks for all the other types.

However, the tall, thin girl has her troubles. She is likely to be narrow through the shoulders which calls for padding in the shoulders of the dress.

FOR GOOD POSTURE

"If her shoulders slope," Mrs. Ives advises, "the dress should be padded to bring the shoulders up and out and even her evening dresses should have covered shoulders or sleeves to give this additional breadth."

Unless her figure is well proportioned, the tall girl must choose dresses that make the waist appear smaller and perhaps higher than it actually is.

The short, stout figure looks best in clothes that accentuate the line from waist to hem, and which have no collars or necklines that make the neck look shorter. This fashion editor recommends hats with upturned brims and trimmings, and slim, unobtrusive belts.

Some of the style hints for the short girl also apply to the petite figure. If you are tiny, be glad of it! For Mrs. Ives thinks this type can appear young almost indefinitely "if she keeps her figure—but it should be a FRESH youthfulness, not the baby doll kind."

CORRECT STYLES

Instead of leaning to the southern belle type of dress, you should buy tailored suits and frocks with simple lines. There should never be any ruffles or bands to cut the length of the skirt. Boleros are all right for the small girl, Mrs. Ives thinks, because they accentuate that line from the waist to hem, giving the illusion of height.

At this time of the year prints are a controversial subject, especially if they are for the large woman. Some fashion authorities favor only the very small, inconspicuous design for her, but Mrs. Ives sees no objection to either the small or the medium design, since neatness of the print is the main thing for this figure. The redingote is flattering to this type figure and is always smart with print dresses.

SYMMETRY EXERCISED

For beach wear, the dressmaker type bathing suit and slacks with a hip length coat are most becoming. Shorts were never designed for the large woman.

The right clothes may, as the saying goes, make the woman—but they can't make her figure over, nor can they completely disguise measurements that are very much out of proportion.

You must exercise for a tiny waistline, or for the slim hips that make your figure look tall rather than wide. Send today for the "Spot Exercise for Symmetry."

Write to Ida Jean Kain, care of this paper, for the exercise leaflet. Enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Home Shampoo

IF the hair is oily and the shampoo doesn't take hold, add a little borax to the melted soap.

Begin with a rousing rinsing. Have three soapings and three more rinsings. Before the last one pour over the head a pint of water to which two tablespoons of cider vinegar have been added.

The effect of the vinegar solution is to remove soap scum that may be adhering to the silk threads and make tresses soft, vibrant and glisteny.

Listen, World!
You Are What You Think

By Elsie Robinson

You speak of "myself"—
You talk of your "life"—
But actually you have
TWO SELVES—
TWO LIVES.

There is the outside life,
And the outside self—
The things you can see,
And the things
That happen to you—
And those outside reactions
Which others observe
And judge.

But you do not like
To be judged by
Those outside gestures—
Do you?
So often you've said,
"I wish people
"Wouldn't judge me
"By the things
"I say and do.
"Those things aren't
THE REAL ME."

You are right—
Those outside gestures
Aren't the REAL YOU.
Those clumsy words
And thoughtless tricks
And bungled acts
Aren't your REAL LIFE.
Your real life
Is lived inside you—
It is lived in
Your secret thoughts,
Your hidden emotions
And those motives
The world cannot see.
There—in the "Secret places
"Of the heart"—
Is your REAL self,
Your REAL life.

Nothing in this world
Is made outside—
Everything happens
First inside.
Stop and look Around you—
Songs and sky-scrapers,
Books and Scientific experiments,
Every material object,
Every mental expression,
Happens first inside.
All these things
In their smallest detail
Are made in the mind
Before they take shape
In wood and metal,
In word or music.
Everything a man makes
Is simply a copy—
Imperfect and distorted—
Of some man's dream.
Everything exists in mind
Before it exists
In matter.

And what is true
Of a chair
Or a painting
Is also true
Of a man himself.
As everything
A man makes
Is only a copy
Of a man's dream,
IS SIMPLY THE COPY OF HIS OWN DREAM—
AND HE IS WHAT HE THINKS.

You have two selves,
Two lives—
But only one true self
And one true life—
And that is
Your inside life.
YOU ARE WHAT YOU THINK—
And you are
EVERYTHING that you think.
"As a man thinketh
"In his heart
"So is he."
YOU ARE WHAT YOU THINK.
No thought is lost.
No urge is unimportant.
They may not
Show at first.
But sooner or later
They will all show.
You can't THINK
One thing—
And BE another thing.
GOD DOESN'T LIFT US
UP TO HEAVEN—
SATAN DOESN'T DRAG US
IN OUR OWN MINDS
WE BUILD
OUR OWN HEAVENS,
WE DIG
OUR OWN HELLS.
IT'S UP TO YOU
TO CHOOSE WHICH YOU WILL THINK.

CHAPTER 15

"Oh believe me, I didn't mean to make trouble! But Miss Ferris is so—so distinguished looking. And he's nothing but a miner," Lucille said.

"I'll handle him," said the Colonel grimly. "And Serena!"

A fresh panic swept over Lucille. If the Colonel did anything like that, somehow her part in it was bound to come out. She got a quick grip on herself.

"Colonel, I—oh, it sounds awful, me trying to advise you. But—sometimes a woman sees things. Miss Ferris is a young girl. She thinks she's in love with him.

"If you forbid her to see him—she's high-strung, you know—she might do something—foolish. But if you were to just say nothing—send her off to school——"

He looked at her. "You think that would break this thing up?"

"I'm sure of it," Lucille [illegible] wisely. "When she gets with the other girls — and, really, Colonel Ferris, speaking as a teacher, I know she needs it on other grounds. A lady needs the accomplishments. Music, drawing, embroidery."

"H'm!" He patted her hand. "Would you do me a favor, my dear? Would you—sort of speak to her?"

LUCILLE DECLINES

[illegible]

"Colonel, I'd do anything for you I could. It's been an inspiration to me, knowing a man like you. But —the truth is, Miss Ferris doesn't like me.

"No really, Colonel, that's true! Some day, I hope to know her better—to win her confidence. But now—"

"You think it would break this thing up? Sendin' her off?"

"Oh, I know it would! A year at the Convent School, at Marysville. Oh, you'll send her?"

"I'll—speak to her. But she won't like it."

"Colonel Ferris, sometimes girls are funny, Colonel. They have to be handled. They kind of like to be handled—sometimes. Told what to do.

"Don't suggest that I said anything about it. And treat that Mr Whitney just the same. But—don't ask her, tell her. Be kind but—no nonsense about it! Honestly, Colonel, she'll respect you more."

He stared at her. For the first time [illegible] "How you come to know so much, Miss Lucille—a little thing like you?"

THE COLONEL ACTS

[illegible] Lance were here [illegible] to have [illegible] with Jared.

His mouth [illegible] rock hard. That damned Yankee [illegible]. Funny part was the man could ride, knew [illegible] behaved like a gentleman. He'd been a steadying influence for Lance, too. Well, the was a Yankee.

Worm himself into a gentleman's confidence—and then have the impudence to raise his eyes to his daughter!

He walked into the [illegible] room on that thought. He was going to tell that child. Not ask her, tell her.

Serena was at her small walnut desk. Her straight brows were bent in a scowl.

A REAL FATHER

The Colonel cleared his throat, ordered her to pack up. Monday he said she was going to start at the Convent School at Marysville.

Serena ran the course of startled astonishment, incredulity, high-headedness.

The Colonel spoke in his Bedford Forrest voice.

Serena knew that voice. She was frightened. "I—I won't go!" she faltered.

"You'll go," the Colonel said. "Monday."

"But—why?"

"Because I say so. It's best for you. And you'll like it."

Serena straightened. "Yes, sir!" she said. "But I won't like it."

Her hair was touseled from clutchings in the harder moments of her accounts. She had inadvertently licked her pen and there was an ink splotch on her lip. These things struck the Colonel as [illegible] pathetic.

"Honey!" He sat down heavily [illegible] she was perched on the arm. She rumpled his hair. "Ah, Kubla Khan, you were fooling. I'd hate it."

"You—you'd like it mighty well, daughter, when you got started. All the other girls—playing games an' all—"

"Games!" said Serena scornfully. "Don't be silly, Kubla Khan, don't let's even talk about it any more! Let's read."

She [illegible] across to the book case. Why, she wasn't anything but a little girl [illegible] That damned [illegible]

"There!" She settled back on the arm of his chair. "Now read!"

"But—look here, daughter! Don't you want to grow up educated?"

THAT'S DIFFERENT!

Serena stiffened. Suddenly in a flash she knew where that came from.

"You've been talking to that—that Minton woman about me! That nasty, purring little—"

"Serena! Miss Minton is a friend of mine! She takes an interest in your welfare."

"She does, does she! Well, I don't care to have her take an interest in me! Honeying up to you—"

"Serena!" The Colonel was on his feet too. "You'll stop that this instant! You'll go to school, young lady! It's high time you got some—"

Serena faced him. Her eyes as hard and angry as his own. "All right then—I'll go to your d—d school—"

"Serena! You'll apologize."

Deliberately, she turned her back and walked out of the room.

FIRST DISOBEDIENCE

The Colonel stared after her. It was the first time in her life that she had ever disobeyed his direct order. She needed school all right, no doubt of that.

Leaning back against the foot board of Jared's bed Lance braced his feet against the bureau and discoursed largely of San Francisco. In the month since the barbecue, Lance had had him a time!

Jared, changing his clothes after coming off shift, listened abstractedly. He hadn't had a time. He had spent the longest month in American history.

He had ridden back to Tenspot that night after the barbecue instead of staying on because he was a little ashamed. He was ashamed of the queer, tingling thrill when he thought of Serena's kiss. After all, she was just a kid.

He had made up his mind not to go back for a while. He had held off for a week, and another week. And then, when he rode over—Serena wasn't there. She was, the Colonel told him, away at school.

He made an excuse as soon as he decently could and ridden eight miles out of his way because there was a man he ought to see at Marysville.

Interpret Your Dreams

YOU'RE PUZZLED BY STRANGE DREAMS?

"THE strangest dream I ever had!" That sentence, spoken in a roomful of people, invariably starts a chain of stories about dreams—baffling, odd, comic.

John tells about his dream of sitting in a cage at the zoo. He remembers he kept saying, "I can't get my umbrella up."

How absurd dreams are, everybody says. But you, if you understand dreams, keep thoughtfully silent. You realize how much happier these people would be if they could read these dream messages from the unconscious mind and could act on them.

Our 40-page booklet, INTERPRETING YOUR DREAMS, tells how to read dream symbols, understand your problems. By a well-known psychologist.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties. BUT, if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure.

Make a note NOW to get a bottle of world famous Pinkham's Compound today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—more than a million women have written in letters reporting benefit.

Why not try LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND?

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

New Faces Follow Fashions

SOFT ROSE and blue tints in the new makeup weave a spell of illusion that bespeaks the clear-eyed freshness of seventeen, as soft voices, soft lights and soft music return to glorify ladies. The off-the-face coiffure accentuates the contours and the skin, which must be lovely in texture and coloring.

Ever alert to the delightful whimsies of Dame Fashion, the cosmeticians are already prepared to give us pink-and-white innocence, combined with a tantalizing mystery, to go with our coy bonnets, filmy bouffant gowns and lacy frills. No fashion has ever been more lovely, but on the other hand none has required such thoughtful attention.

'Pink Lady' Makeup Completes Vogue For Sweetness

By ARLINE GOULD

What did we tell you? Only yesterday we sounded a warning about the return to lady-like fragility and this morning's mail obligingly backs us up. The announcements as to the newest in glamours all agree that we must attain a porcelain prettiness if we would shine in the Easter parade.

And what's more, we will! Isn't it amazing? But after all the fair sex has risen to greater crises. When the boyish form was fashionable, flat chests were everywhere—and after Mae West undulated her way into the style-trend, bosoms came back! Don't ask me—so far as I know its all done with mirrors!

The point is that after such mumbo jumbo the mere change in complexions and manners is a simple matter. In fact, most of us are delighted at the prospect of the new vogue. The hail-fellow-we-met attitude is all very well, but it isn't conducive to romance!

Do you remember—of course you don't—a charming old musical show called "The Pink Lady." The name of it conjures up visions of old fashioned sweetness, Dresden doll complexion and shyly provocative smile.

Well, the most delectable of the new cosmetics I tore right up to a Boston department store to see it, and came away sold and enchanted is called "pink lady makeup."

And aptly titled it is, for after you have seen yourself in it you want to go right out and buy frilly azalea pink blouses and accessories to complete the lovely picture.

Over a soft, pastel foundation that gives your skin the velvety surface necessary to a delicately-tinted cheek, "bluish rouge" is skilfully blended. You will be surprised to find yourself achieving a soft pastel-hued complexion that almost fools even you.

Then the powder. "Pixie Pink" they call it. Don't you love it? It bears no resemblance to the awful pink face powder of our mothers' days, but is instead a deep blush pink which by some wizardry has a changeable undertone that varies according to the individual skin.

To complete the transformation eye-shadow in smoke blue and mascara in midnight blue are added. Then get together with your favorite hairdresser on one of those coquettish new coiffures, and go home and practice wide-eyed smiles before your mirror.

It goes without saying that with this new face, pink and pastels will be a "must" in your spring wardrobe, although the result is equally effective with black.

Wearing this fascinating makeup, blondes attain the fragility of old china; the titian-haired girl's fine skin responds with a warm and transparent glow, and the brunette complexion assumes a soft animation.

It is bound to play havoc in the hearts of men. For the male, however clever, cannot resist demure feminity. And pink is fatal to his discretion!

Better get armed with new makeup, for you must be a pink lady, if you don't want to find yourself making a fourth at bridge with the old folks on moonlit evenings, instead of waltzing (yes, waltzing is back, too) with that tall, handsome lad.

Arline Gould will tell you where to go for these new products, and for a sample "pink lady" makeup, if you will write her at the Boston American, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, or call Liberty 6000 weekdays up to five.

DRAKE TELLS STORY

CHAPTER 5??

ALLEN DRAKE smiled [illegible] she would relay to Katie only a carefully edited story with himself wielding the blue pencil.

"I shan't have the slightest objection to your relaying to her anything I tell you," he said.

Lillian shot a quick shrewd glance at him, and an instant later when he had averted his gaze from hers, her eyes, with a twinkle in them, met mine significantly.

"Well!" Harry Underwood intervened. "Are we all set? I don't want to hurry things, but that bird who's cluttering up the Dickybird's cage upstairs will have to be well on his way to another set of bars before daylight, and that won't be long off now."

"There's no reason for delay," Allen Drake replied. "Are you sure there's no possibility of anyone else hearing me?"

"We can make sure in two minutes," Dicky said, rising abruptly. Having conjugated his moods and tenses for so many years I was sure that he welcomed the opportunity for physical action to dissipate the jealous irritation which was swaying him, and of which, I guessed, he was thoroughly ashamed.

ALL DOORS LOCKED

He made the rounds of the room locking the three doors leading from it, and testing every window lock securely.

Lillian laughed lightly.

"If you'll use the soft pedal on that melodious voice of yours, Allen," she said, "I can guarantee that no sound will escape this room.

"Harry and I always come down here and lock the doors when we want to stage a real row.

"It's as near soundproof as any room can be. So strut your stuff, lad. We're all ears."

ALWAYS THE "CHIEF"

"There isn't very much to tell," Allen Drake said, settling into his chair and lowering his voice, discreetly.

"As you all know, when a certain type of danger crops up and causes sleepless nights in Washington, they always send out a hurry call for the chief, as everybody who ever worked under him still calls him, even though he is not now the actual head of the service.

"THEY FEEL SAFE"

"But make no mistake, he's the head of whatever job he undertakes. He wouldn't take orders from a dictator with a capital "D" when he's once outlined a plan of work."

My heart thrilled with pride at the undisguised reverence and affection [illegible] as he spoke of his father and the bars of anything [illegible] raised against Allen Drake I [illegible] perceptibly.

"Unfortunately," he went on after a pause, "the rats, for whom he is setting traps, know that he is called away from his retirement whenever they begin gnawing at the foundations.

"So, whenever they are plotting an especially beastly job, they set a watch upon your father to see if he has been called from home.

"As long as he stays here, they feel fairly safe."

Happy 11 Years, He Now Seeks Divorce

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I've known of a good many men approaching middle age who grew tired of the old home, the old wife and the old associations. Therefore, the problem of our Melrose column friend is no surprise to me.

Such men, once they shift to newer pastures, are seldom as happy as they imagined they would be. Man-like they usually come back begging the old wife for another chance.

Consequently, my advice to the woman is this: BE SURE IT IS [illegible] THAN A TEMPORARY ABERRATION WITH YOUR HUSBAND BEFORE YOU ACCEPT HIS SUGGESTION. Better a little hesitation now than years of regret later on.

Before passing on to the next problem, let us read the letter that has inspired this advice.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Until the last few months my husband and I had always got along well after [illegible] years of marriage. I have a son [illegible] by a former marriage who is very fond of his stepfather.

Of late my husband has taken to staying out till all hours and has asked for a separation.

He wants to give me the household furniture and [illegible] car and says he will pay the rent.

I feel at times as if I'm losing my mind when he [illegible] won't say a word and even declined to open the Christmas present my son has given him. [illegible] has a good city job.

I just don't know what to do next.

LONESOME WIFE.

DRINKING WITH GANG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

All of my former boy friends are now married so that I haven't any one to chum with. My parents are divorced and I've been rooming by myself for the last nine years earning a small salary.

I am 25. My girl friend, a 21, comes from a fine family and we've been engaged [illegible] and hope to be married [illegible] I wanted to wait [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] able concern, and draws a good-sized salary, has a lovely home and her parents would give her anything within reason.

As we live in separate towns 20 miles apart I get very lonesome and I often think of the rest of the gang [illegible]

JOHN D.

DEAR JOHN:

[illegible] charming fiancee as you describe [illegible] since the young lady [illegible] and you wonder if you couldn't get [illegible] as well as the rest of the gang have [illegible]

I [illegible] your fiancee [illegible] many [illegible] to hold [illegible] for a year or two.

B. U. Professor Sees Long Life by Singing

For a longer life sing regularly [illegible]

[illegible]

The fact that a person sings does not necessarily mean that he will live to be an old age but his chance of increasing his life span will be greater," said Professor Smith.

"I know a man who sang regularly and lived to be 97 years old," he said. "This does not mean that he lived so long because of his singing but in my opinion singing was one of the factors responsible for the length of his life.

"A person who sings will usually be in good health. He will free his mind from worries and will seek friends. Singing is especially noted for developing comradeship. If a person wants to be happy and content there is not a better method than to sing regularly."

James L. Calhoun, 45, of Colton street, South Boston, mail truck driver, was taken to the Newton Hospital today seriously wounded after his pistol accidentally discharged in its holster.

Calhoun was getting into his truck outside the Auburndale post office when the holster caught in the door. Calhoun tried to free the holster from the door and the gun discharged. He was wounded in the stomach.

Orange Woman, 100, Needs No Glasses

ORANGE, Feb. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Catherine (Aunt Kate) Putnam, born in Newport, Vt., when bears used to walk the street at night, began her 100th year of life today confident she would live "at least another year."

She reads without glasses, knits and mends for her grandchildren and when the weather is fair, takes a daily walk.

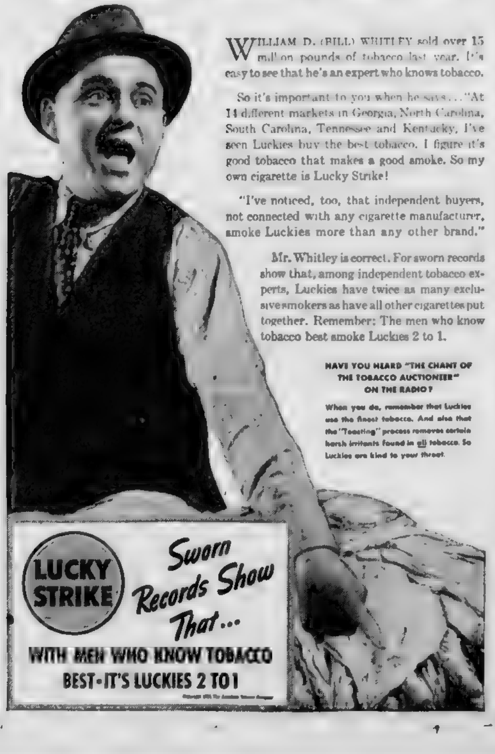
The Rev. Alphonsus Hoban, S. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Hoban of Tremont street, Roxbury, today will be ordained to the priesthood at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Washington.

The young priest will celebrate his first mass Sunday at Mission Church, Roxbury.

HE SEES WHO BUYS WHAT TOBACCO

Like so many other independent experts, Bill Whitley, Tobacco Auctioneer of Henderson, N. C., smokes Luckies



LUCKY STRIKE
Sworn Records Show That...
WITH MEN WHO KNOW TOBACCO BEST—IT'S LUCKIES 2 TO 1

WILLIAM D. (BILL) WHITLEY sold over 15 million pounds of tobacco last year. It's easy to see that he's an expert who knows tobacco.

So it's important to you when he says..."At 14 different markets in Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, I've seen Luckies buy the best tobacco. I figure it's good tobacco that makes a good smoke. So my own cigarette is Lucky Strike!

"I've noticed, too, that independent buyers, not connected with any cigarette manufacturer, smoke Luckies more than any other brand."

Mr. Whitley is correct. For sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together. Remember: The men who know tobacco best smoke Luckies 2 to 1.

HAVE YOU HEARD "THE CHANT OF THE TOBACCO AUCTIONEER" ON THE RADIO?

When you do, remember that Luckies use the finest tobacco. And also that the "Toasting" process removes certain harsh irritants found in all tobacco. So Luckies are kind to your throat.

THE WILKEN FAMILY

BLENDED WHISKEY—IT'S OUR FAMILY'S WHISKEY, NEIGHBOR!

Pa Wilken made the three of us learn those rules by heart!

I guess those rules gotten up by Grandpa Wilken for making whiskey tasty are about the greatest ever set down on paper. Pa Wilken schooled William and Tom and me in them so thorough, we could probably rattle them off in our sleep if you was to ask us. In making our Family's Recipe, we never budge an inch from them!

Harry E. Wilken

It's Grandpa's Rules of Tastiness that make our recipe so elegant!

I suppose in your family you've probably got an old time recipe for a plum pudding or say a mince pie or maybe for cooking up a real fat roast goose or something. And most likely that recipe is so very special and particular that every other plum pudding and mince pie and goose tastes mighty tame stacked up alongside that extra tasty one of yours.

Well it's the same with us Wilkens concerning our Family's Recipe. It so happens our Grandpa was a distiller mighty well thought of in his day. And so was Pa Wilken. And that's how it come about that we piled up all this experience in making whiskey tastier than anything you ever took a try of up to now. We've never once lost sight of Grandpa Wilken's wonderful rules for tastiness in making this personal recipe of ours. I'd just love for you to try it!

Harry E. Wilken

It's sure TASTY and MILD!

GIRL About TOWN

By MARJORIE McBRIDE

This is the concert season in Boston . . . the time when concert lovers really begin to live, and concert pests begin to emerge from their summer hiding places and get into people's hair. And there are such nuisances, even here.

Marjorie McBride

Lots of people don't go to listen to a concert, they go to look around and show off. First of all, there is the late arrival. In Boston, he has to wait until the particular group of songs in progress on his arrival is over before he is admitted to the auditorium.

Anyway, according to Miss Harriet O'Brien, co-producer of concerts with Aaron Richmond at Symphony and Jordan halls, Bostonians are notoriously prompt in getting to big musical events. She thinks that in other respects they top the concert-goers of other cities. They have been attending concerts for generations. They go to hear the music. They don't act as if they were at a prize fight or a fair.

Persons who state are the pet [illegible] of his column. They keep twisting their necks, looking [illegible]. They [illegible] and spend [illegible] their neighbors [illegible]. It's an em[illegible] and can't be [illegible] there are the [illegible] whisperers and the program rustlers.

Tyro Students Show All They Don't Know

Also the third year music students who want to reveal all they don't know about the piece being played [illegible].

Miss O'Brien says the artists like to appear in Boston. Audiences are [illegible] boisterous and never has an artist or conductor had to stop in the middle of a performance and caution the customers to behave themselves. That has happened in most other big cities.

Bostonians are pretty much individualists, and some music lovers take steps against the pests. One old gentleman carries a notebook and pencil. When talkers sit near him he leans over at the end of the aria and says:

"Would you please write down what you are saying? Every now and then the music intrudes and I miss a key word!"

Photographer Ends 11,500-Mile Bus Trip

Henry F. Schmu[illegible], a photographer at Niagara Falls, N. Y., just loves superlatives. He passed through Boston the other day on his way back to the Falls after completing an 11,500-mile journey through the states. Along the trail he took pictures of the longest road in the U. S., which starts in Detroit and winds up as Chicago's Michigan [illegible] . . . the widest street, Woodward avenue, Detroit . . . the oldest [illegible] found outside Chattanooga, Tenn., and cemming 118 years . . . Boston Latin, the oldest public school . . . the glass flowers at Harvard . . . Miami's jail, the tallest in the universe. He made the 11,500 miles by bus and on one bus ticket. It was three yards long. Quite probably the longest in America.

"Good Samaritans" Ambulance Chasers

A lady well known to Girl About Town was struck by an automobile the other evening at Tremont and Beacon streets. Unhappily, she was absent mindedly walking against the lights, and admits it. Two girls who witnessed the accident insisted on accompanying her to Haymarket Relief hospital, and watching her register. She could hardly credit the evidence of her own senses. She hadn't supposed such Good Samaritans still lived. She was out of the hospital within an hour.

Within 48 hours both the Good Samaritans called her . . . in the interests of attorneys specializing in damage cases. And Dewey in New York thinks he has an ambulance chasing problem!

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

A curious headline struck my eye the other day. "Income Survey Finds No Cure for Inequality." The story which followed it seemed to say that the Brookings Institution can find no reasonable answer in its survey of "the economic structure of the United States."

Robert E. Rogers

"The report emphasizes the fact that because of the number and variety of the causes of income inequality no single remedy can cope with the problem of improving income distribution and eliminating poverty."

But does anybody in his right mind imagine that anybody, except a thoroughly besotted New Dealer, expects any administrative or legislative devices to do anything to bring about "equality" in the population, even an economic equality, which I suppose is what is meant.

The Brookings Institution usually has too much sense to use language so loosely and inexactly, so New Dealishly let us say, as this statement would seem to imply.

I am not sure that even the creator of the New Deal has ever gone so far as to speak of "economic equality." The furthest he has gone, and no sane man could go farther—is to speak of improving the lot of the under-privileged, that third—to use the New Deal language which is ill housed, ill clothed and ill-nourished.

Jefferson Was Cagey In Defining Equality

Equality as Thomas Jefferson understood when he penned the Declaration is essentially a religious or metaphysical concept. The only equality that exists or ever existed or ever can exist is equality in the sight of God.

Years ago Thomas Huxley, in reviewing an essay about Jean Jacques Rousseau, made it perfectly plain that even physically and physiologically there can be no such thing as equality. To a considerable extent we are what our bodies have made us.

To an even greater extent we and our lives are functions of the kind of brains we were born with. Or if you do not care for the [illegible] idea of "innate" mental qualities you can lay the responsibility off on environment and the surroundings you were brought up among. Either way you will not find equality as a demonstrable proposition.

You will notice how cagey Thomas Jefferson was in defining his equality. "Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Not even its attainment. Nothing but the right to its pursuit. Once more we are forced back on the imponderables, the metaphysical conceptions.

But says the eager idealist, surely there is one possibility left, the equality of income, the equality of wealth. Money at least is tangible. Money can be equalized. And so the Brookings Institute tackles the job of a survey of the income structure of the United States and is forced to conclude that there, too, the complexities of the problem are so great that no remedy is discoverable for inequalities of income, in a word, for poverty.

Because equality considered in terms of economics is once more only a function of something which cannot be legislated for or organized administratively even by ukase.

At bottom wealth is a function of brains. Sometimes of inheritance, sometimes of luck. Sometimes of the time, the place, and the opportunity. Perhaps glaring inequalities can be mitigated.

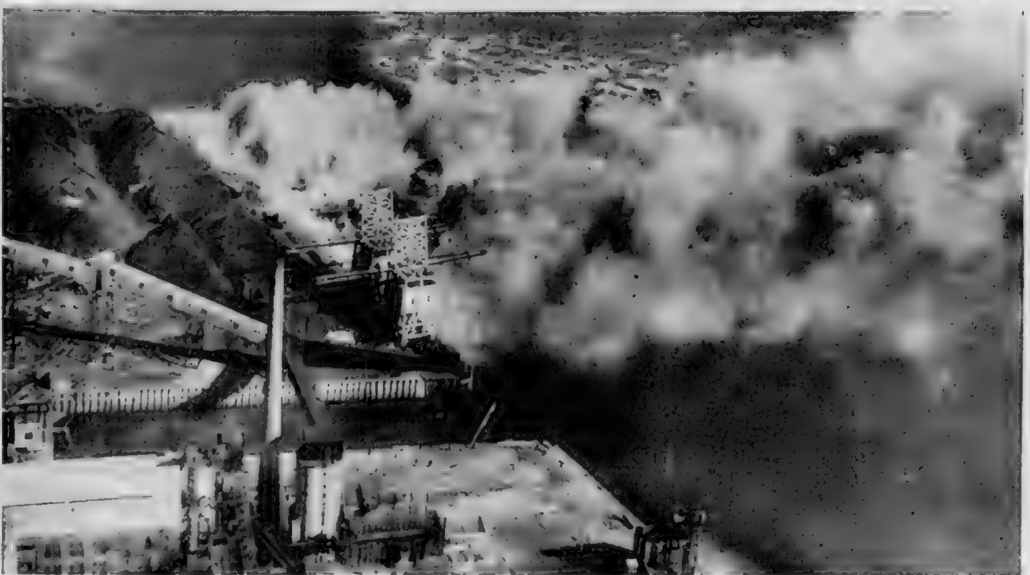
Legislation Can't Change Situation

I suspect that this, orotundly phrased, is all that the President has in mind. But in the long run you will find that wealth is a function of brains. It can have nothing to do with the equality before God which Jefferson was thinking of.

And as Jefferson knew and the Brookings Institution knows and the New Deal seems to be rather ignorant of, no amount of legislation and administration can do anything to change the situation.

Income might be equalized by legislation. But the use of wealth—which is all wealth means—is at the mercy of the natural and unescapable inequality of human beings. Jesus' parable of the talents is still the best of psychology and the only practicable solution of the puzzle.

$500,000 Blaze Sweeps Dock in Lynn



A spectacular fire picture made from an airplane shows the $500,000 general alarm fire on the dock of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company, at Broad street, Lynn. Before fire equipment could get to the blaze it had spread to the coal conveyors and to the huge piles of coal you see on the dock. Edwin Stephan of the Boston Evening American photograph staff took the picture from a Wiggins Air Lines plane, which was piloted by Ralph Ames.

A closeup of the coal elevator of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company while the fire was at its height. A large conveyor tower nearby was first to go down under the terrific blaze that was soon into many of the coal heaps stored along the pier. The fire was fought from land and from the harbor's water.

Attracted to the scene by clouds of smoke that could be seen for miles, the Rev. Michael Collins (hat off) of the Star of the Sea Church, Marblehead, is administering the last rites of the Catholic Church to Charles McIntyre, Lynn fireman. McIntyre was rescued from near drowning when he plunged into the icy water with eight other firemen.

Tobin Names Whitcomb, Phone Head, to Survey Job

Richard Whitcomb of Springfield, manager of the western division of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, today was appointed director of the Boston survey committee by Mayor Tobin.

Whitcomb has resigned his $10,000 post with the telephone company to accept his new appointment, Mayor Tobin said, and will shortly establish a residence in Boston.

Whitcomb, 44, is a native of Topeka, Kansas. He is a World War veteran, a graduate of Washburn College, Topeka, and has been engaged in telephone work since 1924. Prior to that he was a newspaperman.

Whitcomb will begin his new duties Monday by starting reorganization of the financial structure of the water income division of the municipal public works department.

This division, the mayor believes, is greatly in need of reorganization both on the basis of efficiency and with a view to making the service self-supporting. For the past seven years the division has shown an annual deficit and much difficulty has been encountered in the collection of water bills.

Mayor Tobin said no definite arrangements have been made as yet as to Whitcomb's salary. The mayor believes that it will require at least 12 months for Whitcomb to introduce business-like methods in city departments.

The survey committee will be composed of city employes and business experts whose services will be loaned by private concerns.

EXCLUSIVE: Eugene O'Neill's next play will be a realistic drama about a labor leader who has a Jekyll-Hyde mentality . . . Although the Theater Guild may produce it Sam H. Harris will see the manuscript before it is placed in production . . . One reason for the "first dramatist's" residence near Seattle was to enable him to work and get material in a city where labor activity is pronounced . . .

SHORTS: Alexander Woollcott will not be interviewed but will see reporters . . . Former heavyweight contender James Maloney has returned to his home town to open a tavern if he can find a suitable location . . . Although Shamus has been reported in Miami and Seattle recently actually he has been in Brooklyn. There the South Boston athlete is a partner in a tavern . . . Cortez, the male half of the grand dancing team of Peggy and Cortez has been swallowed up in the Spanish upheaval . . . The couple had many Boston friends . . . Peggy has gone to her home in British Columbia and says she has not heard from her former partner since he sailed for Spain a year ago last August . . . Jane [illegible] will divide between the stage of Keith's Memorial where her vocalizing accompanies the Snow White and Seven Dwarfs picture and Steuben's her old singing stand.

Fifty years a drama editor, and six additional years a member of the staff of the same Boston journal, Charles Howard was "surprised" yesterday at the Hotel Bradford by the Boston press-agents . . . Critic Howard was lured from his office to listen to a "squawk" from some New York executives who were in town ostensibly to get more newspaper space for their company . . . For a half hour at luncheon the popular drama sage was "ribbed" by the space-grabbers . . . Then he was given a check for a thousand dollars . . .

Joe Lyons, the [illegible] man associated with Harvey Cushing [illegible] Roosevelt [illegible] sure that the Roosevelt-Harvey "breach" will be patched up . . . Meanwhile Lieutenant Governor Hurley is getting plenty of cheers . . . Not since the early days of the late Martin Lomasney has a young Bostonian appeared on the political scene who has such a chance to be a mahatma of votes as the comparatively young Jimmie O'Keefe . . . The [illegible] (O'Keefe was the first and most steadfast backer of the mayor) placed the unselfish Jimmie in the first rank of [illegible] . . . ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

Eddie Bean and Ray Engle, the Boston youngsters who teamed up while playing Boston nightclubs, are being held over at Saxe, one of the good places in Detroit . . . Cesar Romero's impersonation of Harry Richman in "Happy Landing" is a peach. The Henie picture uses the Richman-Merrill flight as the basis for early scenes . . . Bill Coker, general manager and Samuel Zemurray, newly-elected president of a famous banana company dined together at El Morocco. They hail from New Orleans and are Bostonians by adoption.

Arthur Fiedler was engulfed by admirers at the premiere of "Wine of Choice" . . . There is a mite of jealousy between Fred Waring and Rudy Vallee on account of nothing more than a cocktail mixer . . . Waring is inventor of the gadget he lugs around to mix refreshments for his friends . . . Vallee made the news columns by appearing at the Cafe Lamaze in Hollywood with his own electrical cocktail shaker . . . But he didn't INVENT it.

The group of African natives showing at the Sportsmen's Show opened last night at the Hotel Copley Square's cozy Keyhole room to give their version of "swing" to the tune of real tom-toms and jungle saxophones.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 10—Just heard officially that Charles Boyer and not Robert Montgomery will be starred in "Pepi Le Moko," the famous French film which has been so much discussed in Hollywood.

Who better than Charles could play the romantic French thief who knows his Paris?

Louella Parsons

Not that Bob isn't a good actor but in this bit of casting Charles is a happier choice. Walter Wanger, who purchased "Pepi Le Moko" from M-G-M will change the title to the more easily pronounced "Algiers."

Sascha Lawrence is now at work on the translation of the original French script by Detective Ashelbe of the French Provincial Police and [illegible] who also [illegible] though the Duvivier [illegible] be borrowed from M-G-M for the remake of his [illegible] Cromwell [illegible] the fascinating [illegible] for the 1937 Academy Award.

Chicago's History on Screen

Some of the fire engines, all charred from the original Chicago fire of 1871, take part in the motion picture version of the catastrophe which provides a climactic scene in "In Old Chicago," the Darryl F. Zanuck astounding production coming to the Colonial Theater, Boston, on Monday evening.

A complete reproduction of the nineteenth century Chicago was built and destroyed by fire to obtain the remarkable and thrilling climax to the picture.

While the flames roared skyward on the 101 acre 20th Century-Fox studio lot, modern Los Angeles city fire apparatus and the studio's own completely equipped fire laddies "supervised" the blaze to prevent an actual repetition of the old timer. This was necessary because more than 1000 persons and hundreds of head of cattle were practically 'on their own' among the blazing buildings.

The tense dramatic love story of the mid-West of the bygone era was directed by Henry King with H. Bruce Humberstone scoring an assist on the fire sequences. "In Old Chicago" co-stars Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche and features Alice Brady and Brian Donlevy.

The spectacular picture was adapted for the screen by Sonya Levien and Lamar Trotti from an original story by Niven Busch.

Universal Appeal by Disney

Of the millions of persons throughout the world who see Walt Disney's pictures each day, only a comparative few take the time to realize, perhaps, that one of the principal reasons for their universal appeal is the manner in which Disney succeeds in endowing animals with human characteristics and, what is more important, with human foibles.

This will be found particularly true of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," his first feature-length picture, an RKO Radio release opening today at Keith Memorial Theater, although it must be remembered that in the featuring "human" players in "Snow White" are not caricatures.

To the contrary, they are credible beings who [illegible] an absorbing romantic story, who talk and sing and comport themselves just as do all other [illegible]. That is to say, the [illegible] first time, Disney characters [illegible] "straight."

But there are countless [illegible] the animals in the picture, the kind which the famous producer is so capable of endowing with human qualities, and that is one of the reasons why this story was chosen for Disney's first feature-length production.

There are rabbits, squirrels, chipmunks, several kinds of birds, tortoises and deers. Yet you'll notice a villain among them.

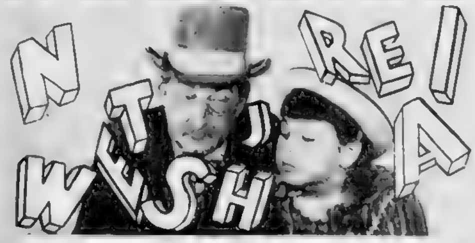
No. 23 — Boston American — "Name the Movie Stars"



NAME OF

23

The Letters In This Picture, When Properly Arranged, Spell the Name of a Popular Movie Star! Do You Know Who It Is?

THE RULES

WHO CAN ENTER? This game is open to all bona fide residents of New England—men, women, boys and girls everywhere—except employes of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser and members of their families.

WHAT TO DO? Every week day a picture containing the scrambled name of a movie star will be published in the Boston Evening American until 49 have appeared. Unscramble the name. Use every letter in the picture. Write, typewrite or print the name on the line provided or on any piece of paper. Hold all answers until you have the complete set of 49. DO NOT SEND THEM IN SEPARATELY.

WHERE TO SEND? Mail your entry by First Class Mail to Movie Stars, Boston American, P. O. Box 866, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Massachusetts. Send a letter with your entry giving your name and address and telling in 50 words or less who is your favorite movie star and why. Letters will be considered only in the event of ties in naming the stars. Entries must be in the office of the Boston American by midnight 10 days after the Name No. 49 has appeared.

BASIS OF AWARDS. Entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Boston American. Entrants agree that the judges' decisions must be final. Awards will be paid to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved complete sets of unscrambled names. Neither handwriting nor elaborateness will count. In the event of a tie between or among two or more entrants for any of the prizes, the prize or prizes next in order will be combined in a lump sum and then evenly distributed among those tying.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

Thursday things you will hear through the heavy-laden air lanes loom as likely to make loud-speaker patronage well worth the while tonight.

Robert Taylor takes occasion to make it known that Virginia Bruce can be counted upon to be broadcasting while he masters the "Good News of 1938" program (WNAC) ceremonies from 9 to 10 o'clock this evening.

"N F T"

Also as a special attraction under the Taylor hour listing, is the appearance of James Stewart and John Carradine, likewise of filmdom. Stewart and Carradine have "Of Human Hearts" to stage in a dramatic way for dialers, with Carradine characterizing Abraham Lincoln and Jim cast as a soldier of the Union Army. It is something based on the hectic Civil War era and holds forth by way of Lincoln's birthday observance.

FLEETING FLASHES

Surprise struck with real spirit at the spacious WMEX studios yesterday evening when the entire Hub station personnel joined to have a Happy Birthday time for Alfred Pote, who is of the front office there and termed by many the Marconi of New England by virtue of his deep rooted knowledge of the technical phases of radio transmission. Sending out sound in [illegible] fashion is a thrilling [illegible] ing beers in the country can tell A. Pote anything about that he doesn't already know and none can lay claim to being more modest.

A [illegible] company [illegible] Brian Aherne and Beverly Roberts of the movies and Gertrude Wettergren of the Metropolitan Opera has been recruited to help Bing Crosby and Bob Burns keep things [illegible] in the Music Hall [illegible] WNAC tonight.

The weekly proceedings will be broadcast as usual at 10 p. m.

Brian Aherne is thoroughly familiar with the Crosby brand of [illegible] as a result of his previous visits to the Hall. He and Bing will cook up a very special few minutes of entertainment for the occasion.

* * *

Ralph Bellamy, Hollywood [illegible] [illegible] favorite, plans to make his first radio appearance since his movie triumph with Irene Dunne in "The Awful Truth" when he heads the dramatic sketch in the Kate Smith Hour in its airing tonight (WEEI) this evening at 8:00 p. m.

The musical portion of the program will be highlighted by Kate's memory song, chosen from those melodies that have [illegible] the years since they first achieved popularity.

LIKED BY LISTENERS

More than many scores of requests have reached WMEX sound sanctums hereabouts for another arrangement of the song "Sheila" composed by Lew Tobin and Nat Madison in honor of the heroine in the story, "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly," being so closely followed currently by thousands in the columns of the Boston Evening American.

It's a vivid and finely fashioned ballad selection, and the Request Serenade half hour due at 11 o'clock tonight along the WMEX channels will find it featured in a striking musical manner by "The Eight Virginians" choral group, so recently applauded by Metropolitan Theater audiences.

John Kiley will provide the organ accompaniment, and if Ruth Weidman, the striking "Sheila" heroine of the story, is back from a [illegible] in New York she will be on hand to enjoy the set [illegible] for she is [illegible] of the honor.

* * *

Mrs. Sophie Antone [illegible] of Pittsburgh, Pa. will be [illegible] the list of guests on Gabriel Heatter's "We the People" program (WEEI) this evening at [illegible] o'clock. Her purpose is to tell [illegible] it is her greatest ambition to live for at least two more years.

Among the other guests who have been granted time to tell their own life experiences will be Paul [illegible] [illegible], an artist who will plead for a square deal for beards, and Joseph [illegible] of Newark, N. J. who [illegible] in his own backyard.

VALLEE VARIETY

Mary Boland is scheduled to bring her radio character [illegible] Mrs. Buffington [illegible] the Rudy Vallee [illegible] WNAC tonight.

Other guests are [illegible] the 8 to 9 o'clock broadcast are Lasses White and Honey Wildes [illegible] Thomas Mitchell [illegible] [illegible] the personable Tommy Riggs and his little lass named Betty Lou.

French Airliner Crash Laid to Fog

MARSEILLE, France, Feb. 10—Government inspectors today in [illegible] the wreckage [illegible] Mediterranean [illegible] eight bodies were [illegible] after the ship had crashed [illegible] the [illegible] water here and exploded. Fog was held accountable largely for the crash.

The six survivors who escaped through a trapdoor [illegible] boat were in a hospital here suffering shock and burns.

1938 Nobel Prize Urged for Sec. Hull

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 10—An appeal to the Nobel Peace Prize selection committee to award the 1938 prize to Secretary of State [illegible] Hull has been made by Dr. Carlos Saavedra Lamas. Argentine foreign minister. Dr. Lamas won the Nobel prize [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the London economic conference of 1933 and his fight against trade restrictions.

AUSTEN LAKE

Lady Who Pets Snakes; Gent Who Catches Animals

AUSTEN LAKE

FOR THOSE AMONG US WHO ARE SUCKERS for the deep-tangled wildwood and life under the leafy bow the display of hunting weapons, lethal gadgets and fun-machines at Mechanics Hall induces the itch to be up and off. There are rows of tiny pump-guns which explode like a maiden's sigh, miniature fishhooks with needle points concealed under colored fuzz, bright carving instruments for shucking off pelts, and the latest luxuries for roughing it painlessly. To folk who like to pot the furred, feathered and finny creatures it is fascinating. But to the beasts, birds and fish behind wire and glass, it is a chamber of horrors.

Not all of course. The central stage where the Pekes, Poms and little insect dogs are benched during kennel shows, has been turned into a rustic vista with a dripping waterwheel, cabins of unpeeled logs, a woodsy setting and the murmur of running water where clipped mallards swim and girl guides extol the beauties of Maine. On the auditorium floor where the wrestlers are wont to grunt and the fighters flick their mittens, there is a canvas lake with lumber jacks rolling logs or pole tilting from the gunnels of canoes. Full rigged sail boats with mahogany bottoms stand around the aisles. Portable movies show you how to fry a trout. Male models wear the latest forest fashions. A mechanical robot recites canned sermons. Self conscious Indians sell wicker work. Salesmen solicit outboard motors built like egg beaters. There is no end to the marvels.

She Cuddles a Gila

BUT THERE ARE TWO DISPLAYS AMID this welter of sport curiosa which mix anthropology with zoology and have nothing to do with fun-making. I mean the African village operated by an ex-Everett resident named Everett Buck, and the snake museum under the custody of Mrs. Eugenia Shorrock of Savin Hill. And there, my friends, is something to grow icicles on your neck.

For Mrs. Shorrock's hobby is reptiles—not little play-snakes of the graveyard type, but big pythons and boas like elongated loaves of rye bread, and pebbled Gila monsters of dappled pink, or black gopher snakes shiny as your boot—great ones and small ones and all like something seen in a cheese dream.

Mrs. Shorrock likes 'em for their own sake and she keeps 'em in a spare bedroom at her Savin Hill home. They all have their venom sacks and fangs intact, she says, because a mutilated snake is not a snake at all. The Gila is her particular pet and though his bite is as deadly as a rattle snake, she picked it from its cage and showed off its cuddly qualities by scratching the nape of its ugly neck and picking bits of lint from its scales.

No! She doesn't fondle the other reptiles much. But once a 12 foot python had broken his glass cage and escaped into her apartment, being found when her husband came home from work and creating a slight domestic fuss. But Mr. Shorrock was getting used to his creepy household, though still shaking out his sheets before climbing into bed and sometimes feeling of his pant legs. An East Indian cobra has come to live with the Shorrocks lately and, being a smart snake in the head, is more apt to get into mischief. She feels a slight uneasiness about this fellow because the Shorrock medicine chest contains only anti-snake bite serum for the U. S. varieties and she isn't quite sure whether it would work if the cobra snapped at somebody.

Debunking the Animal Catchers

MRS. SHORROCK STARTED COLLECTING SNAKES three years ago. She just felt a kind of sympathetic urge to get some snakes. So she started with some little candy-striped adders and, before she knew it, there were nearly a hundred species. She has never caught a snake herself, but she studies the collector's lists and sometimes meets the boats bearing fresh stocks from Asia and Central America, buying a prize bargain boa here and a Grade-A moccasin there. She feeds them well and keeps their cages tidy and feels a maternal pride in their health. But she felt, she said, that such an expensive collection should be self supporting so she takes them on tour once each year around the Sportsman's Show circuit.

The other character-oddity is Everett Buck, the African animal catcher, who is shoving off Sunday for a quick, three months jaunt to the Cameroons for a batch of six or seven hundred specimens. To those of us who know about animal collecting from the Martin's movies, he is disillusioning—a slight, reticent man with a quiet voice.

Indeed, he searched his soul for some hair-breadth jungle adventures with which to enliven this opus, but, beyond the fact that "driver-ants" had once eaten half his catch of animals near Sierra Leone, he found nothing in his 16 excursions to the Dark Continent to stir the pulse.

While a squad of imported blacks beat drum rhythms hooted and hulaed in the artificial kraal, Mr. Buck explained that the African interior was comparable with the forests of Maine. You hired your guides, pitched your camp, paid trappers to catch and box your specimens, and the porters carried them out. As simple as that.

Like John Benson's animal ranch at Nashua, N. H., he runs a private zoo at Camden, N. J., where he houses his surplus of beasts, fowl and serpents before selling them to circuses and zoos. His father, retired in Florida, had been in the business before him and as a kid he had learned his alphabet from his daddy's animal ark—A for Aoudad (a North African sheep) to Z for Zoril (a South African polecat).

Big trick in animal hunting, he said, was to get the permits from African authorities to hunt the animals. He had been three years trying to wangle a permit to capture three gorillas. Once he had the permit, he said, the beasts were practically in his bag. Just a simple little business.

Eleo Sears Faces Barbara Williams In Nationals

Ann Page, Champion, Wins Twice to Enter Semifinal Round

Miss Eleonora Sears, state champion, will find herself pitted against Miss Barbara Williams of Philadelphia as play in the women's national squash racquets tournament resumes this morning at the Harvard Club.

The Sears-Williams match will open the quarter-final round.

Miss Sears, having entered this round by her sparkling victory over Mrs. C. Crawford Madeira, will find Miss Williams a worthy opponent.

Yesterday the Philadelphian displayed a whirlwind game to force Muriel Pierpoint of the Quaker City out of the running. Miss Williams won in three straight sets.

Cecile Bowes of Philadelphia, after downing Mrs. A. W. Paine of New York in three sets, finds herself paired with Miss Elizabeth Pearson, former holder of the national squash crown.

Crisler Takes Michigan Post

Football Coach Quits At Princeton

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 10 (INS)—Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler has resigned as head football coach at Princeton University to take over a similar position at Michigan with additional duties [illegible] athletic [illegible].

Fritz Crisler

Crisler's resignation accepted by the university council [illegible] athletics at the February meeting in the Nassau Club here had been more or less expected [illegible] began to circulate that he would be offered the post vacated by Harry Kipke.

Professor Burnham N. Dell, '12, chairman of the council, announced briefly that Crisler had been released from his contract with Princeton, which had two more years to run.

Thus ended a career for Crisler at Princeton that began in 1932, and brought to Princeton some of the greatest football teams it had ever known.

During his regime, Princeton teams compiled a record of 35 victories, nine losses and five ties for a total of 1064 points against opponents' 309.

But alumni dissatisfaction ran high last season, when both Yale and Harvard, among others, trounced the Tigers, and even a surprise victory over Navy on the final game failed to still the unrest.

Dilboy Amateur Fights Tonight

Robichaud, State 147 Champion, Entered

Gene Robichaud, state 147-pound amateur boxing champion, faces plenty of trouble tonight in the third elimination series of the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., Golden Gloves tournament at K. of C. Hall in Somerville.

Director Fred Russo has received the entries of Mike DiNapoli, Roslindale; Hollis Regan, South Boston; Dick Wunskel, Fisherville; Valley Mayes, Roxbury; and Angelo Chellis for the 147's, and this class may provide the show highlights. Boxing in the eight title classes and the tournament is sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. A. U.

Sylvio Laperle is another 147-pounder coming with a team from the Worcester Boys' Club, which includes Homer Robichaud, 118; Tony Biondi, 126; Ray Gustafson, 135, and Johnny Hanson, 175.

Other star entries are Guy Vitagliano, Medford, 112; Ray Fournier, Manchester, N. H., 112; Roderick Almeida, East Boston, 112; Mike Dalton, East Boston, and Sabino Panzelli, West End, 118; Jackie Hurd, West End, and Edward Caton, East Boston, 126; Joe DiNapoli, Roslindale, 135; Hugh Connerty, Jamaica Plain, and Ed Remillard, Fisherville, 160; Joe Gauthier, Fisherville, and Manuel Corriera, Falmouth, 175, and Frank Mercurio, Hingham, heavyweight.

Kaplan Sparkles In Big Time Debut

Youngster Gets Draw With N. E. Lightweight Champ at Garden

By JACK CONWAY

The boy's name is Mike Kaplan. He is 19 years of age with big startled-looking eyes.

When he walked at Honey Melody in the Garden ring his expression reminded me of a [illegible] who had been dropped [illegible] a glimpse at the wonders of Santa Claus.

When you looked at the boy from your ringside seat you felt like walking over to him and asking [illegible] wonder he happen[illegible].

Then he started moving, his [illegible] both of [illegible] through the air and [illegible] his body from side to side [illegible].

HE'S A NATURAL

Then an old fellow with a bruised ear and a badly [illegible] something about the boy being a natural.

It seems that when one is a natural at boxing he does things from instinct rather than from any special instructions he has received.

The boy kept moving around and [illegible] for ten rounds [illegible] it was all over the officials called it a draw.

It [illegible] matter how they voted as the boy had had the New England lightweight champion even, which was no small feat in itself.

I was a bit curious and checked [illegible] on the official decision for the benefit of [illegible] Jawn Public who sometimes likes to know how the [illegible].

Judge [illegible] voted for Kaplan [illegible] card gave the boy [illegible] points and Melody [illegible] points.

Judge Shaughnessy voted for Melody with 87 points for the champion and 8[illegible] for the [illegible].

Referee Johnny Brassil awarded champion and challenger each [illegible] points.

THE KID COMES BACK

The bout was that close. The [illegible] was a good one and perhaps the boy will get another crack at the champion.

[illegible] like a champion. He jabbed and boxed the champion, and countered with sharp right hand punches to the jaw. The boy looked as if he was going to coast in.

The fifth round was fairly even while in the sixth Melody breezed out front.

It was in the sixth session that the boy got his real test under fire.

The champion blazed a terrific right hand punch to the jaw and the boy's knees sagged, but his heart was as sturdy as ever.

The boy held on for a few seconds, then fought back with both hands. His big eyes looked like searchlights as he went to his corner.

Melody continued his heavy attack in the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds.

CLOSE ALL THE WAY

It didn't look very well for the boy in the ninth round. He was being forced back under heavy fist fire.

Then he suddenly turned, nailed Melody on the side of the head with a sizzling right hand punch and almost turned the champion around.

Mellody shook off the punch and drove his way to close quarters again. From then on until the bout ended Mellody maintained a slight advantage, but it was a hard, gruelling scrap all the way.

The boy's eyes fairly popped out of his head as he waited for the official decision. I was pleased it was a draw as the boy then didn't have any reason for disappointment.

Mellody, a seasoned campaigner, took the decision as part of a night's work. He thought he had a slight margin, but was pleased for the boy's sake the verdict had been a draw.

It was one of the best lightweight bouts ever held in this city and it is to be regretted that there were only 3478 paying customers on hand to see the excitement. The gross gate was $4,331 and the net gate $3,230.

BARTOLO CLICKS

In the eight-round semifinal Roy Kelley of Brookline won the decision over Lou Pastor of New York.

Salvatore Bartolo of East Boston fought his best fight as a professional to outscore Sammy Garcia of Quincy over the six-round route.

Abe Denner of the West End outscored George Harper in six heats.

Incidentally Kelley, Bartolo and Denner are all graduates of Hearst All-America tournaments.

Jimmy O'Boyne and Joe Glasgow boxed six rounds to a draw.

New Mat Champion Arrives

Louis Thesz, heavyweight wrestling champion, arrived in the South Station early today full of fight and an urgent desire to retain his crown. The big St. Louis matman meets Steve Casey, the Irish giant, in a title match at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. Even though a grown-up, Lou wonders what makes the Iron Horse go.

'NEW BASKETBALL RULES HERE TO STAY'—HOLMAN

By JOHN VAN CRONKHITE

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (INS)—"The new basketball rules are here to stay."

Nat Holman is speaking ... the same Nat Holman who for [illegible] years with the original Celtics gained a reputation as a player that [illegible] will never be equaled.

Nat is coach now at the City College of New York and his crack team were getting ready for the Madison Square Garden affair with Fordham.

"You can quote me as saying the elimination of the center jump has now conclusively proved to be the greatest blessing basketball has ever known."

Nat was very positive about it. I asked him:

"What about the coaches who apparently are not in favor of the new rules?"

"I think they'll feel differently as they watch the game change," Nat said, "anyway, they haven't a chance to get the old rules back in force again.

"The majority of the coaches like the new rules. The players like them and the fans are daffy about the game now."

Nat should know something about it all too. He's vice-president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"By the way," says I, "what about this talk of the new rules running the player's heart?"

"Stuff and nonsense!" Nat snapped impatiently, "just stuff!"

"Furthermore," he added, there's probably no type of basketball that'll hurt a player's heart.

"Either the player had a bad heart before he started playing or else he's got other complications like a cold or lung trouble and that puts a strain on his heart."

It seems the Pacific Coast conference started experimenting with the new rules back in 1935. It was this experiment that led to the new rules being adopted nationally this year.

"The new game," said Holman, "has about everybody happy. It's a faster game and more scores are made, hence, the spectators like it.

"In addition, the elimination of the center jump has added about [illegible] more minutes of playing time."

[illegible] Nat [illegible] considers the greatest benefit to the players the nerves as a result of the new rules.

"That's an easy one," he comes back, "The new rules now show that the game is really given back to the players as a group.

"Before, the team with the tallest players had the advantage and the tall players dominated the game just because they were tall, not because they were better players."

It was getting near time for a game so I asked Nat which team he thought would win.

"You've got something there," he said. "The new rules make it tough to pick the winners. Upsets are the rule now, and the days are about gone when a team can hope for a undefeated season."

Young Mat King In Rare Trim For Bout

Princess Baba, Other Notables Sit in Tomorrow

Louis Thesz, world heavyweight champion, arrived in Boston this morning for his title contest with Steve (Crusher) Casey of Sneem, County Kerry, Ireland, listed as No. 1 challenger by the American Wrestling Association.

Their battle is scheduled for tomorrow night at Boston Garden, and promises to bring out the largest crowd that has watched a wrestling match in this city in many years.

Thesz was accompanied here by his personal representative, Samuel Muchnick, former St. Louis newspaper man. Martin Thesz, the champion's father-manager, will be in tomorrow.

Besides more than 100 enthusiastic Thesz followers made the trip [illegible] the [illegible] to victory.

Thesz has been training hard in St. Louis for [illegible] battle.

At first it was planned for him to do [illegible] training in Boston, but when his father could not make the trip so early Thesz decided to train in St. Louis under his dad's watchful eye.

The elder Thesz, once a Hungarian champion, has developed his son as a matman since Lou was 12 years old.

Lou has worked daily with five training mates preparing for this battle. He realizes Casey is probably the toughest assignment he could receive. He does not want to lose the title right after he has won it.

"Condition is what will help my boy most in his match with Casey," Papa Thesz writes. "Every day of his life my boy trains hard. I taught him that. You see, I'm an old wrestler myself.

"My boy has no bad habits. He may smoke a pipe once in a while. But he doesn't drink alcoholic liquors of any kind."

• • •

Casey will do no more conditioning for his title battle with Thesz except light road work.

"Steve is right on edge—trained to a very fine point," said Jack Albright, his manager. "I have heard of wrestlers and boxers becoming stale, and I don't want that to happen to Steve.

"This is the biggest match of his entire career. I want him to be perfectly conditioned, for I expect him to win that championship."

• • •

[illegible] Sandow, manager of Everett Marshall, from whom Thesz won the championship, has reserved a ringside seat. He will be at the match to offer the winner $1[illegible] to wrestle Marshall for the title.

• • •

This title battle will bring together two of the greatest wrestlers the world has had in recent years, each boasting an almost unbelievable record.

Thesz has suffered but two defeats in more than 200 matches. Casey has not lost so much as a fall in more than 3[illegible] professional and amateur bouts both in Europe and America.

• • •

Friday's battle is bringing out many people who never before have attended wrestling shows. They will be there partly to get a glimpse of Beautiful Princess Baba, daughter of the Rajah of Sarawak, and her husband, handsome Bob Gregory.

The Princess will be seated in a royal box, which will be bedecked with flags. When the title contest is over, she will be escorted by a police detail to the ring, where she will present the lineal $10,000 diamond-studded belt and the Midwest Wrestling Association championship belt to the winner—either the champion, who has retained his title, or the new champion of the world.

The Princess' husband will referee the contest. Gregory is light-heavyweight wrestling champion of Europe. Besides, he is a licensed referee in his own country.

While ill feeling has cropped up between the champion and challenger, because of personalities they have brought into their match, Gregory appears well able to keep the situation well under control.

• • •

Besides the main bout, the following matches are on tomorrow's card: George (Dazzler) Clark, Scotland, vs. John Paul Jones, Texas, special bout; Cliff Olsen, Minnesota, vs. Chief Osley Saunooke, Cherokee Indian, semi-final; Ed Don George, twice world's champion, vs. Pat Reilly, Texas; The Sheik, Arabia, vs. Leo Ryan, Fordham University; Hans Steinke, Germany, vs. Joe Swan, Shamrocks gridder; Harry Manios, Greece, vs. Bob (Bibber) McCoy, Cambridge, and Wee Willie Davis, Virginia, vs. Angelo Lorenzo, Italy.

Phils Sign Rebel

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10—Arthur Rebel, 23, outfielder who played last year with Bartlesville, Okla., and who was recently declared a free agent by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, has signed with the Phillies.

I love the U. S. A.
Dear Joe

They told me here that the reason the New York Giants didn't return to Cuba for their spring training was because they couldn't stand the embarrassment of being beaten in the exhibition games by the native ball clubs.

So last Sunday night I went out to see a couple of the clubs they told me held decisions over the National League champions.

And this is what I saw.

The final score of the game was something like 17-8. (When I quit in the last of the eighth they were still running around the bases.)

The pitcher who got NICKED for the 17 runs and about 24 hits was still ducking line drives when I decided I had had enough.

THEY CAN RUN

All I can say for Cuban ball players is that they are fast.

That game might not have been a true criterion for the lighting equipment for night baseball was not of the best.

Yet it was the only game I saw, Joe, and inasmuch as you wanted to know how good these Cubans are, all I can tell you is what I saw in the one game.

The players are so fast that they keep over running the ball or they pick it up at such a terrific clip that they are too far off balance to make a throw.

Circus catches evidently are a rarity with the outfielders, for on two occasions the left fielder of one of the teams picked one off his shoes and caught runners who didn't even look back to see if the ball was caught for double plays.

The runners concede the outfielders no chance of getting ordinary long flies and they start with the crack of the bat. Two other runners were doubled up at first base while they were rounding third.

When the count is 3 and 0 they all try to pickle the next one, and at least two batters hit at bad balls.

BIG BOYS

The outfielders maybe it was the lighting—can't seem to go back at all for long flies.

Most of them bounce over their heads and many of the hits in this game were the result of outfielders and infielders getting tangled up on who was going to take it.

They make everything look hard and constantly get themselves into trouble.

Contrary to what I expected, most of the players are young giants and they take some healthy pokes at the ball.

There were two home runs inside the ball park, which is quite spacious except for a short right field fence, but there are very few right field hitters.

The game wasn't lacking in excitement and when they get mad at the umpire here somebody gets hurt.

In this game the winning club called Almendares (a suburb of Havana) after scoring 14 runs BEGAN to rub it in.

With two men on, an outfielder got up and hit a long fly to left field that landed in almost absolute darkness.

The opposing outfielder ran over and then stopped, yelled back the ball landed foul but the umpire ruled differently and the runner cleared all bases for a home run.

THEY DON'T HUSTLE

The catcher on the opposing club, called Marianao (another suburb of Havana), turned around and bounced a right hand off the umpire's chin.

The ump (about two heads shorter than the catcher) got up and hit the catcher over the head with his mask flooring him for the full count and splitting his head.

They had to carry the catcher off the field and a near free for all almost resulted but they have police within horse shoe pitching distance and the near riot was immediately quelled.

There is little hustle or hustle on the field unless the ball is in action. When an inning ends the team on the field calmly walk off.

BETTING RAMPANT

Admission to the game is 50 cents for men and 25 cents for women. After you get into the park, should you pick out a choice seat, a guy comes around and charges you a dime more to sit there.

With the exception of this fellow, I never saw an usher.

The box seats are all located in the back of the grandstand. There are no bleachers and the grandstand extends from halfway to the corner of left field around to halfway to first base.

The rest of the first base and right field viewing section is a tremendous hill.

Betting goes on throughout the game. There is very little cheering or hooting. The noise you hear throughout the game comes from bookmakers yelling prices.

Before the game a fellow sells little sealed envelopes for twenty cents. Inside is a slip of paper with a position such as left field or second base marked on it.

If you buy one and that fellow on either team scores the first run of the game, then you win $1.40.

I might have run into a bad game, Joe, but I'm convinced the Giants didn't return here because Cubans played steps or baseball.

Dolph Luque, Giants coach, was at the game and he was very much pleased to hear that the Boston baseball writers had not forgotten the late Nick Flatley and named their award to Jim Turner "The Nick Flatley Trophy."

Rideout, Brown Twins From Texas Look Alike, Talk Alike, Run Alike

Tipplers Will Think They're Seeing Double At B. A. A. Games

By MURRAY KRAMER

WARNING—All those who bend the elbow will kindly refrain from so doing at B. A. A. games Saturday night at the Garden.

This is no warning from the W. C. T. U., nor is it a lecture on the evils of demon rum. No, just a friendly tip.

The reason is that a pair of twins named Blaine and Wayne Rideout came up from Texas last year for the games and several gentlemen immediately left the Garden when they came on, for "seein' double" is always a bad sign.

FOUR ON SAME RELAY

Now to make it even more confusing, Wayne and Blaine will compose half a relay team Saturday and the other two will be Elmer and Delmer Brown. Yes, you guessed it, another pair of twins.

So, it's double exposure night Saturday and the knights of the Bottle may run into a bit of confusion.

Therefore, pay heed, brother knights, and everything will be O. K. down at the train shed day after tomorrow.

These boys are really twins and look and talk very much alike.

In fact, rumor has it if Wayne or Elmer isn't certain of a stiff exam down at North Texas State Teachers in steps Blaine or Delmer and the situation is well taken care of.

The situation has become so acute that a faculty meeting is being contemplated to decide on the possibility of having the boys fingerprint their examination papers.

But their academic troubles are their own concern, brother knights. Ours is the track meet.

These boys are not headed for Boston as a sideshow. They really can pound those boards.

BROKE WORLD RECORD

Last year the Rideout boys did not look so impressive but that was due to the fact that indoor competition was new to them. They have made remarkable strides since and proved it at the Millrose games last Saturday night.

The "twinses" took part in a college medley relay of 1¼ miles and established a new world record for the distance when they were clocked in 7 min. 27 5-10 seconds.

Now if you want still further proof, the archives show that Wayne whipped Don Lash over the two mile route in the Sugar Bowl Games two years ago and last spring Elmer logged the best in the nation over the quarter mile route at Princeton.

And Saturday these two will team with their brothers in the two mile relay against Harvard, Yale, Manhattan, Holy Cross, Boston College and N. Y. U., are hoping not only to win but to set up a new mark.

Tom Kanaly, director of the games, who refuses to join the knights, has been made an honorary member and is attempting to talk Choc Sportsman, coach of the boys, into running the Rideouts one and three giving the Brown boys two and four.

NOT A MIRAGE

Sir Thomas realizes that one or two of the members may miss this article and fears that if those who neglect this timely warning see Blaine pass the baton to Wayne they may figure it will be time for them to pass—out.

So, once again we urge all brother members to remain calm, cool and collected. There will be no mirages for seeing double—that is unless—

Any member who sees Glenn Cunningham or Don Lash twice—all rules are called off and it's every man for himself.

Three trophies will be retired Saturday night. The Hollis 600, the Lapham 1000 and the Billings two-mile are all events where new muggs will have to be used next year. In all three events last year's winners are entered, and if they repeated they automatically take the trophies, otherwise it reverts to the winner turning the best time over the past three years. The defending champs are Jim Herbert in the 600, Lou Burns in the 1000 and Don Lash in the two mile.

Double or Nothing

No optical illusion here. Just Wayne, left (we hope), and his brother Blaine, right, packing for their Boston invasion. They will represent North Texas State Teachers' College at the Boston Garden Saturday night. They will be paired with the Brown twins. The Blaine twins and the Rideout twins broke the world medley relay mark at the Millrose games last week.

DIZ EAGER TO SIGN

Willing to Take Cut Of $5000, Too

BRADENTON, Fla., Feb. 10 (INS)—Displaying a conciliatory spirit startling in its unexpectedness, Dizzy Dean announced today he wanted to sign at once with the St. Louis Cardinals and was willing to take a $5000 cut in salary.

Diz said he was ready to sign for $20,000, which is $5000 less than he claims he received last year, but the rub is that even this figure is considerably more—some say $10,000 more—than the Cards have offered him.

"I'm not really a holdout," said the famous pitcher. "I want to get signed and join the team for the first day of practice. I believe I will be back in my old-time form this year.

"I don't think my price is unreasonable. Sure, I had a bad year last season, but I was hurt in that all-star game, and it affected my pitching all the rest of the season. I'm back in shape now."

DIZZY DEAN

Dean said he had not heard from the Cardinals since he sent his contract back unsigned, January 14.

O'Mahoney Hurt On Arena Mat

Arthur O'Mahoney, Irish middleweight wrestler, who suffered a hemorrhage of the spinal cord last night in a match with Paul Adams, of Georgia, at the Boston Arena, today was reported as resting comfortably at City Hospital.

O'Mahoney was hurt when he was thrown heavily to the mat, landing on his neck.

The young Irishman suffered a hemorrhage of the spinal cord after eight minutes of wrestling with Paul Adams in their mat week feature at the Arena.

Dr. Walter Gleason, of Quincy, examined him and ordered him to the hospital where X-rays were to be taken today.

Sandy McDonald then substituted for O'Mahoney and startled the gathering by defeating Adams in two out of three falls and taking the diadem.

Ted Germaine won the battle royal from Chippewa Charlie, Dave Mann and Izzy Goldberg.

FITZGERALD'S 595 BOWLAWAY RECORD

A new record of 595 for Bowlaway events was made by Jack Fitzgerald, president of the Old Timers and representing the South Station alleys, in the February Bowlaway held at the Webster alleys in a field of 19 contestants.

So superior in bowling form was Fitzgerald that the contest was too one-sided to arouse the enthusiasm of the spectators regarding the victor, as Fitzgerald finished 66 pins in front of Al Andrews, the second money winner.

The remarkable demonstration of skill in pulling off strikes, earning difficult spares and picking the single pins by Fitzgerald is rarely seen on a bowling alley in a money event. His average pinfall per string was 119.

The battle for the smaller money prizes was waged right to the final boxes before the contending bowlers' ratings could be determined and then only ten pins separated the last five men receiving cash awards. The score of prize winners follows:

Bowler	Home Alley	Pinfall

Colorful Thesz Ready for Bout | Princess Baba Is Real Beauty

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

LOUIS THESZ popped into town today with all of the confidence and enthusiasm one usually expects to find in a champion. The 22-year-old Hungarian youngster from St. Louis came here following his decisive victory over Ernie Dusek in St. Louis. Thesz didn't carry a mark from the Dusek bout, and declared this match put him on edge for his defense of his world's heavyweight wrestling championship at the Garden tomorrow night.

You will like Thesz. He is young and colorful, and has a tremendous amount of wrestling ability. I saw Thesz the night he knocked off Rudy Dusek at the Garden, and he impressed me as being the fastest big man to ever step into a ring.

Standing six feet one and a half inches in height and weighing 220 pounds, Thesz has the speed and sparkle of a middleweight.

Thesz will prove much faster than Casey. He will swarm all over the Irishman in the early stages of the bout, and big Steve will have to be careful or he will be the victim of a quick fall.

Thesz blazed his way into prominence by victories over Everett Marshall and Dan O'Mahony. If he can now add Casey to his list of victims, he will have the No. 1 claim to the world's championship.

The American Wrestling Association recently stripped Yvon Robert of his title when the Frenchman refused to meet Thesz who at the time was the Mid-Western champion as a result of his win over Everett Marshall.

Bob Gregory, English middleweight and light heavyweight wrestling champion who will referee, will give Thesz and Casey instructions on the rules at a special meeting called for tomorrow noon. Gregory is versed in the rules of the American Wrestling Association under whose rules the title battle will be staged.

Gregory has been doing a little light training himself as he wishes to be in the best of condition when he steps to the center of the ring to handle the big fellows.

Princess Baba will occupy the royal box, and will present the winner of tomorrow night's bout with the two world's championship belts. It will be the first time in the history of either a title wrestling or boxing show that a Princess of royal blood has ever graced the occasion.

Princess Baba will make the presentation in the ring which will give the large crowd in the Garden tomorrow night an opportunity to see Her Highness. Princess Baba is 22 years old, a blonde, and very radiant.

I have gone on record as of the opinion Princess Baba is more beautiful than Sonja Henie. If you attend the Garden show tomorrow night, I am quite sure you will agree with me.

Wrestling Set for New Boom

WRESTLING appears headed for another great boom if the advance sale for the Thesz-Casey bout indicates anything. Tommy Pare, in charge of the sale of tickets at Paul Bowser's office at No. 13 Chauncy street, says the rush for the precious pasteboards reminds him of the days when Gus Sonnenberg was champion.

The public has been quick to recognize the fact Thesz and Casey are the world's outstanding heavyweights and that the victor of the Garden battle will not have to ask for favors from anybody. There is also interest in the appearance of Bob Gregory as referee and the fact Princess Baba will attend the show.

One sports event after another is attracting large gatherings. It is a case of where the public will turn out for what it considers a major offering. The Thesz-Casey tussle is by far the most important mat contest arranged for this city in several years.

I'll be parked in the press row when the action starts and I think I am going to witness some of the greatest thrills offered by a Boston sports promoter in several years. I'll be seeing you at the Garden tomorrow night.

Bets on Mann to Defeat Joe Louis

PAUL DEMPSKI, manager of Gunnar Barlund, was in a ringside seat as Kid Kaplan and Honey Melody battled to a draw at the Garden last night. Dempski was [illegible] to get a close-up of Kaplan, who he had been told was one of the most promising young lightweights in the country.

Dempski has Barlund batting Buddy Baer in the New York Garden early next month.

"I think Barlund will stop Buddy Baer," said Dempski. "Barlund is a terrific puncher and is sure to get a good shot at Baer.

"I look for the world's heavyweight championship to change hands when Nathan Mann battles Joe Louis in the New York Garden on February 23. I seldom bet on a boxing bout, and when I do I always win. I am betting on Mann to beat Louis this time.

"In New York they are backing Louis to win at odds of 4 to 1. I do not believe any heavyweight is a 4 to 1 shot to win unless he is opposed by a stumble bum. Anything can happen in a heavyweight match. One well delivered sock can change the entire situation.

"Mann is young, ambitious, a good puncher and in fine physical condition. I will have plenty of money on him by the time the bout starts, and I believe we shall both have cause for a celebration after the final sock has been delivered."

Harvard Baseball Squad Opens Practice Monday

Although the winter sports schedule at Harvard is still in full swing, the first faint indications that spring is on its way came today with the official announcement by Varsity Baseball Coach Fred Mitchell that spring practice will start next Monday.

Varsity batterymen will report for indoor practice at the Briggs Cage at 2.30 p. m. with freshman aspirants answering Coach Samborski's call at 4.30.

The outlook for the varsity is bright with nine lettermen due to report. The losses of Captain Tom Bilodeau, star shortstop, and of veteran Frank Owen at third will present the Harvard coach with his most serious problem. The pitching staff could stand considerable bolstering, but with big Ed Ingalls as a nucleus and with the help of promising sophomore talent, Coach Mitchell should be able to muster a better than average crop of hurlers.

Leading candidates for infield berths are Captain-elect Ulysses Lupien, who has been playing a very good guard for Wes Fesler's varsity basketball team. "Lupe" was the Crimson's leading sticker last year and holds a wide lead over rival candidates for the first-base job.

Veterans Paul Doyle, ranking catcher; Reino Grondahl, and Art Johns, crack second-sacker, will probably round out the infield. "Slim" Curtiss will battle Ingalls for the starting pitcher's job, while Don Prouty, Bob Gannett, Dave Shean and John Sullivan are veteran outfielders.

Renewing a policy discontinued two autumns ago, Coach Mitchell held informal fall baseball practice up to November in an effort to acquaint himself with promising talent from the junior varsity and freshman squads. This was deemed necessary on account of losses by graduation which will affect the team's hitting strength in particular.

The response to this invitation was quite surprising, as on any balmy fall afternoon up to two dozen young hopefuls could be seen cavorting about on the varsity diamond on Soldiers Field while the varsity footballers were going through a stiff workout in another area. Enthusiasm such as this points to a highly successful season for the Crimson nine.

Irish Boxers Trek to Gym For Workout

Canadian Amateurs To Arrive Here Saturday

The amateur boxers from Ireland, who will compete in the big International Amateur boxing tournament at the Garden Monday night, were getting rid of their sea legs today in a local gymnasium.

The Canadian team will arrive in Boston Saturday morning.

The middleweight class in this contest of nations will be watched very closely by the fight fans of New England. The Irish representative is no stranger in these parts.

COFFEY'S BEEN AROUND

Michael Coffey of County Limerick is the Irish middleweight champion of 1938 and was the National welter titleholder in 1934.

Coffey also was the National Jubilee champion of 1936 and was a member of the Irish team which came to this country in 1935 and won his class at the Garden on that occasion.

Coffey has beaten Arne Anundsen of Norway, Jackie Caparell and Johnny Smith (Quincy), both of whom were the U. S. A. representatives in the 1935 International Show at the Garden, Anderson of Denmark as well as Redeman and Lundbert of the same country.

The Canadian 160 pounder in Monday night's bouts will be Dominic Itala, an Italian-Canadian who is the present Provincial champion.

Itala has been boxing for the past five years. He has had [illegible] fights and won plenty of them by the k. o. route.

SMITH FAVORITE

One of the U. S. battlers in this class is Lewis Smith of East Boston, 1938 State champion and winner in the inter-city show held in Washington last Friday night. Smith has everything that goes to make a champion and will be a heavy favorite to win the class.

The other wearer of the stars and stripes will be Sisto Paulini of Newton, one of the finest looking boys uncovered in the pure ranks in New England in years.

New Troubles Face 'Gansett

considered permanent. They pointed out that under the purported reorganization agreement all local interests were to be purged and complete control taken over by New York interests.

The first act of the new board of directors was to reinstate W. Jeb Ames as track publicity director and Patrick Horgan as a starter. Both had been dismissed by O'Hara.

JUMP IN STOCKS

Immediate repercussions of the reorganization were seen in the stock market where brisk trading caused the track stock to jump from 4¾ to 5½ a share soon after opening.

Meanwhile three new obstacles arose to impede restoration of horse racing in Rhode Island.

First was Governor Robert E. Quinn's announcement that he would back a bill to increase the tax on the operations of the $2,[illegible] racing plant.

Second was the Governor's determination to keep the track closed until he "is assured that clean racing will be conducted."

And finally there was the possibility that Mayor Thomas P. McCoy of Pawtucket, where the track is located, might block the granting of a license. The mayor is a friend and close ally of O'Hara.

The governor, moving spirit behind O'Hara's removal, warned he may keep the track closed until he has been assured of "clean racing."

Although he characterized the enforced resignation of O'Hara as a "victory for the people of Rhode Island," the governor said he must be absolutely sure that the racing association has "purged itself of the O'Hara influence" before he will allow racing to resume.

FACE NEW BARRIERS

It had been expected that O'Hara's removal would smooth the way to a peaceful understanding between the racing group and the governor.

The hint of further barriers to a reopening of the track caused consternation among the racing men and indicated their battle has not been completely won.

Reports were also prevalent that O'Hara, who still owns, with relatives, 49,000 shares of the racing association, would sell these shares and sever all connections with the organization over which he once held sway.

O'Hara's resignation as president, managing director and member of the board of directors of the track came at the 11th hour of a stockholders' meeting called to demand his removal. Only a few hours before he had declared he had his enemies beaten.

The resignation was announced by Judge James E. Dooley, vice president of the Narragansett Racing Association.

Judge Dooley said O'Hara had released the association from all obligations. In return for cancelling his managing director's contract, Dooley said, the association granted him $25,000 and a $100,000 insurance policy on his life, held by the association.

O'Hara's contract, for five years at $75,000 a year, still had three years to run.

JIM MALONEY JACK SHARKEY

JIM MALONEY JACK SHARKEY

Boston's most famous heavyweight rivals of yesterday, Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey, meet again. It was in 1925 that Sharkey and Maloney first met here in Boston. Their feud lasted for some time and only ended when Sharkey knocked Maloney out in New York. Maloney returned to Boston two days ago and is shown above visiting Sharkey at the latter's Tavern. The feud is over but it will live forever in New England boxing history.

Tufts Takes on Northeastern

Boston's two most erratic court teams meet in the Cousens gymnasium in Medford tonight when Tufts plays host to the Northeastern hoopmen.

The Jumbos have alternately played brilliantly and poorly throughout their entire season while the Huskies have had to switch their lineup because of the loss of several players at difficult moments.

The fact that both Tufts and Northeastern were defeated last week by New Hampshire University seems to point to a close game, for the scores were about equal.

Co-Captain Al Galuszka will still watch his Tufts teammates from the sidelines for his injured ankle is still bothering him.

Freddy Jenkins, 120-pound Medford boy, who made such a flash in the first few games, will hold that forward position, paired with Phil Varney, rangy blond who had previously displaced Jenkins.

Charlie Tibbs will take the jump position, with Bennie Collier and Jim Weldon at the guards. Co-Captain Tony Wojy will be alternated with Tibbs at center.

The freshmen of the two colleges will meet in a preliminary game, starting at 7.15 o'clock.

'No Place Like Home,' Sighs Jim

South Boston Pride Plans to Open Tavern Here

Jim Maloney, South Boston's greatest heavyweight product, is all through roaming the country.

"There is no place like Boston," Jimmy said, after returning here.

Maloney quit Boston for Miami about three years ago. He bought a home there and established a permanent residence.

The wanderlust grabbed him again, however, and he pulled stakes and went West, only to return to New York [illegible] ago where he ran a tavern.

DICK HIS PARTNER

Jimmy expects to open a tavern in Boston soon [illegible] Maloney, his brother, who has been boxing here [illegible] the past two years [illegible] the tavern with [illegible].

[illegible] here Maloney [illegible] Jack Sharkey [illegible] Maloney and Sharkey were at one time the [illegible] heavyweights in New England [illegible].

Their feud started back in 1925 and finally ended in New York when Sharkey knocked Maloney out of the running for the heavyweight championship in 1927.

WILL REFEREE, TOO

The feud continued when Sharkey became part owner of [illegible] Maloney [illegible] after that Sharkey was always [illegible] Maloney.

In fact Sharkey [illegible] a keep [illegible] Maloney.

Jimmy has received several offers to referee wrestling matches and says he probably will accept them.

Holmes Winner Of Dash Event

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 10 (AP) — Cyril Holmes of England won the 220-yard dash at the British Empire track and field games today in 21.2, a new Empire games record. J. Mumford of Australia was second and E. W. Best of Australia third. Larry O'Connor, Toronto, Canada, fourth; H. Yates, Australia, fifth, and [illegible] Roberts of England, sixth.

Rap Diving Judges In Anzac Meet

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 10 (INS)—Complaints registered by Canadian competitors regarding methods of judging the diving contests in the British Empire games were supported today by Sydney newspapers.

The Sydney Telegraph stated:

"The complaints were justified by the complete lack of conformity in the judges' awards."

Another expert expressed the opinion that Athans of Canada easily won the high diving event although the victory was awarded to Tomalin of England.

Old Skating King Dies in Norway

OSLO, Norway, Feb. 10—Axel Paulsen, 82, who won the world speed skating title in the United States in 1884, is dead here.

Paulsen achieved his greatest fame as a figure skater, however. He originated the famous Paulsen jump which now is included in the routine of every outstanding figure skater.

FROZEN FACTS

Mrs. Weiland Saw Crash in Dream | Olympics to Start Playoffs Next Week

By BILL GRIMES

BETWEEN MIDNIGHT and 1 o'clock last Saturday morning "Cooney" Weiland, Bruins center, figured in an automobile accident while returning from a visit with his mother and sister in North Toronto.

BILL GRIMES

Cooney, along with Bill Finlayson, his brother-in-law, who was driving him, and Reg McIlwain, operator of the other car, who played hockey here some years ago with the Boston Tigers, were sent to the St. Mike's Hospital for treatment. All were badly cut about their faces and heads.

Mrs. Weiland, who was at her home in Allston, awoke trembling and horror stricken at 5.30 last Saturday morning.

During the night, her sleep had been disturbed by dreams of a serious accident.

Although she did not recognize either of the other two victims, Mrs. Weiland had seen her husband, and according to her vision, he was painfully injured.

Naturally she was badly frightened, particularly so when she realized that the accident, as she saw it in her dream, did not occur on the ice.

Her first reaction was to call Cooney on the telephone. Although she was not averse to waking her husband at 5.30 a. m. under the circumstances she hesitated to disturb his roommate, Gosh Pettinger.

After pacing around her apartment for a [illegible] two hours vainly trying to shake off thoughts of her dream, and at the same time striving to convince herself that she was foolish to give it a second thought, she called some friends on the phone and explained her thoughts.

They tried to console her but without success. She was convinced that Cooney had met with a serious accident.

Finally Mrs. Art Ross called her. Just as soon as she recognized the voice of the wife of the Bruins manager, Mrs. Weiland knew she had experienced a [illegible].

There are [illegible] and [illegible] that three stitches had been taken in his head and that he had been badly shaken up.

So Mrs. [illegible] Cooney Weiland [illegible] to appear on the [illegible] radio program, during which [illegible] are featured.

Olympics Meet Valleyfield in Playoffs

THE ROBINS had a light practice session today at the Arena. The players rested up yesterday and Trainer Win Green predicts that all of the injured members of the squad will be fit for Les Canadiens Sunday night at the Boston Garden. One week from tonight the Olympics will start the Provincial League playoffs at the Garden against the Valleyfield Braves. The first three games of the series will be decided here with the complete meeting on [illegible] day night and Sunday afternoon. This series should be the best amateur attraction staged here since the good old days of the B. A. A. Westminster feuds. The Olympics have developed a [illegible] following so do not wait until the last day to purchase tickets. The Provincial League [illegible] attempted to send the [illegible] Red Sox here for Saturday but Walter A. Brown, general manager of the Garden and Arena, put his veto to that plan and won a [illegible].

[illegible] Clark, coach and quarterback of the Detroit Lions, and Ernie Caddel, star halfback, are rabid Red Wings rooters. They seldom miss a game in Detroit. [illegible] Blake and [illegible] are out of the Canuck lineup for two or possibly three weeks. Blake has a [illegible] and [illegible] X-ray plates are developed it was believed he had suffered some broken ribs. [illegible] has a broken wrist . . . Normie Smith has chalked up two shut outs this season. Both over Les Canadiens . . . Exeter and Andover will play their 25th annual hockey game Saturday afternoon at the Arena . . . Red Wings can move into third place tonight IF they beat Rangers and IF the Black Hawks lose to Canadiens . . . Montreal Maroons will play ten games in the next 18 days, at the end of which time they will either have eliminated themselves from the playoffs or ousted the Americans . . . Tommy Gorman predicts that the four games per week diet will whip his charges into a winning streak . . . Pat Hayes, former Bruin now with the Canucks, has made 11 goals and 13 assists for 24 points this season.

Drillon Rates Kerr Best Goaler

JUDGING from his comments, Gordon "Lefty" Drillon of the Toronto Maple Leafs, who is the top scorer of the N. H. L., has the goal minders pretty well tabbed.

"Lefty" rates Davie Kerr of the New York Rangers as tops. He says Davie is the toughest in the league for him to beat.

[illegible] Bill Beveridge of the Montreal Maroons, Drillon states he's [illegible] to give me any trouble."

Tiny Thompson, he says has the best pair of hands, and he adds that he can beat Normie Smith, Detroit Red Wings, with any kind of a shot.

"DAVIE KERR is the best goalie," declares the pride of Moncton, N. B., "because, he cuts off angles better than any of the others."

Joey Sullivan, old Toronto Varsity goalie, was the first net guardian to play forward of his cage. Joey must have been keen in mathematics for he was the first to arrive at the answer that angles are cut off by coming out of goal nets.

Poke Checking Becoming Obsolete

COONEY WEILAND, Bruins, Hooley Smith, Americans, and Pit Lepine, Canadiens, are the last of a long line of great sweep poke checkers.

"Moose" Johnson, who played with Art Ross on the old Montreal Wanderers, is credited with being the first player to resort to poke checking.

Ontario experts claim Jack Walker originated that type of defense play. Walker starred in Toronto, Detroit, Port Arthur and Seattle.

Some old timers believe Walker taught Frank Nighbor the art of poke checking, but up around Ottawa they'll tell you "Moose" Johnson was Nighbor's first tutor.

Since forward passing has been allowed, stick handling is also becoming a lost art.

Incidentally, Johnson played hockey until he was 45 years of age.

Bauer Has Made 11 Goals, 10 Assists

UNLESS MANAGER CECIL HART of Les Canadiens eases up, the New Haven Eagles will be unable to "ice" a quota of players. Hart has recalled Gus Mancuso, George Brown and Ossie Osmundson to fill vacancies caused by injuries to his Canuck outfit. Mancuso and Brown were "up" earlier in the season, but Osmundsen, who has been bouncing in and out of minor leagues since the days when George Funk sponsored the Bronx Tigers on the Can-Am League, has never been awarded a varsity letter by Canadiens. Hart is trying to pry a Pittsburgh forward from Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings. The Canuck mentor is also looking at Patsy Sequin, Sherbrooke goalie.

Little Bobby Bauer, of the Bruins Sauerkraut line, has made 11 goals and 10 assists. Not bad for his first year in the big show . . . Carson Cooper, a real Beau Brummel during the days he was with the Bruins, is scouting for the Red Wings. In his heyday, Cooper packed one of the best shots in the N. H. L. . . . The Sherbrooke club established a new attendance record recently while playing Quebec of the Montreal City Senior Group. There were 4656 paid customers at that conflict. Sherbrooke has applied for a Senior Group franchise and may be admitted next season . . . Archie Wilcox the Sherbrooke coach, has developed a real club and is the fair haired boy in that city . . . Babe Seibert and "Hooley" Smith crashed head on during the Canadiens-Americans game in Montreal last Saturday night. Both took the long count.

"Butch" Keeling, New York Rangers, will wind up his big league career this spring. He was with the Maple Leafs before joining the New Yorkers . . . "Red" Horner is the only ten year man on the Toronto roster . . . Bus Boll, Maple Leafs, is out with a "charlie horse" received in the Bruins game . . . Despite their creaking joints, the Americans would meet with better success if they'd eliminate their referee baiting. Must be they are getting old and crabby, particularly their pop off manager, Red Dutton.

Do not look for any more startling news concerning the antics of Connie Smythe until Sunday night. The Maple Leafs are playing at home tonight and Saturday. Connie is very demure in his own home town. He'll probably let go Sunday night in Chicago.

Worcester Goaler Fractures Wrist

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 10—Jimmy Purcell, goalie for the Worcester team of the American Roller Polo League, suffered a double fracture of the right hand when he was hit by a hard drive while playing against the Providence Bears at Infantry Hall Tuesday, X-rays revealed.

He is expected to be out the rest of the season.

Henry Cotton Guaranteed $26,500

Reason for Refusing Offers of U. S. Golf Committee

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—The venerable Amos Alonzo Stagg holed in at Lake Worth, Fla., for a time, but swore it wasn't to escape the "rigors" of the California climate.

The Yanks have laid the groundwork for another home run crew by shortening the park of their new Kansas City farm . . . At the same time, the name of the ranch was changed to Ruppert Stadium . . . Some of the old guard are still hollering about the Penn coaching situation . . . His critics say Tony Galento's buckheadedness is heading him from the sublime to the ridiculous.

There's a gal out in Joplin, Mo., who thinks Ky Laffoon's first name is Kentucky . . . And did any one in the congregation ever hear Buddy Baer called by his front handle? . . . It's Jacob.

"OLD FEELING" REMAINS

Frank W. Keaney, three-sport coach at Rhode Island State for 20 years, apparently is set for life as he always turns out top-notch teams . . . Keaney had to laugh when they eliminated the center tap in basketball—his teams have been doing it for five years.

Here's a guy who really got "that old feeling": In a football game at Florence, Col., last season, one of the teams got its signals mixed and the snap from center went straight back . . . The referee, a former backfield man, made a perfect catch and gained five yards before he realized what he was doing . . .

Judge Landis is considering a fresh hair cut, but not a new hat—and definitely . . . Why, he got one only year before last.

One reason Henry Cotton, the high hat British golf pro, isn't coming to the United States this year is that he doesn't need the shillings, by jove. . . He's guaranteed $26,500 for 1938 and everything he gets out of writings and other sidelines is just that much gravy.

For the second consecutive year, Sonja Henie has been selected as the prettiest girl athlete in the world by the youthful face and figures institute. . . .We wouldn't argue about it but we'd settle for Kay Stammers.

State football and basketball championships can't be determined in New Mexico because of small population and excessive travelling distances.

B. C. Ice Team Faces Colby

The very much vanquished Boston College Eagle hockey sextet will attempt to pull itself out of the "rough" tonight as it takes on the speedy Colby sextet at the Arena.

Still licking their wounds from the terrific lacing inflicted by the flashing Boston University Terriers on Tuesday night, the Eagles hope to smash out a win tonight.

The Maine lads will invade the Arena quite confident of a win over the Eagles. They have battled the Terriers to a 6-6 deadlock only last week and feel that that's enough to warrant them a win over the Eagles.

Frankie Lowery, high scorer for the Kelleymen, will pivot the first trio of forwards in place of Captain Joe Hartigan, who will be lost for the remainder of the season due to a spine injury.

Lowery will team up with Jim Davis and Tom Sharkey on the forward wall. Joe Powers and Tom O'Callaghan on the defense and Mario Roscio in the cage.

Joe DiMaggio Managed By Gould, Report Says

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (INS)—What with one thing and another, it seems reasonable to announce that Joe DiMaggio is now being managed by Joe Gould, the ex-pilot of the ex-champion Jim Braddock.

We doubt if there is anything on paper between the two, but there is something in their relationship that goes a bit beyond their warm friendship.

Gould, always a pretty shrewd hand at jimmying bigger purses out of the fight promoters, may well be behind DiMaggio's current holdout—although of course a ball player doesn't necessarily need a liaison officer to convince him to hold out.

RUTH HAD MANAGER

The wonder of all this is that it hasn't happened more often.

In the fight game a man can't walk into a commission officer unless armed with and accompanied by a manager.

The manager, under the laws of most states, takes 33 1-3 per cent of the fighter's purse, but in the case of Kearns and Dempsey, Gould and Braddock, and a number of other famous combinations, it was strictly a 50-50 split.

In the case of Primo Carnera, who had more managers than teeth, the fighter got the least common denominator.

We often wondered why this leech-like relationship was not also evident in baseball.

There is no rule in the constitution of the game that prohibits a player from hooking up with a manager. Several players have had them, the most famous combinations between Ruth and Christy Walsh.

But Walsh was shrewd enough to confine his managering to getting the breakfast-mush endorsements and leading the boys to the microphones, by their nose rings.

BARROW FROWNS

He never ventured into the room where the players haggled with their boss, and, so the boys say, never prompted them to ask for all the traffic would bear.

He never took a slice of his clients' salaries. Ten per cent was his charge for the outside business he dug up.

We gave a buzz to Ed Barrow, the business manager of the Yankees, today and asked him what would happen if a ball player followed the custom of the fighters and bustled into a salary conference equipped with a manager.

"We'd toss the bum out," remarked Mr. B., in effect.

"Which one?"

"The manager. We'll never do any business with a manager. It just isn't done in baseball. I know there's nothing in the rules to prohibit it, but tradition.

"Owners have always chosen to deal with the players directly. And it seems to me that that suits the players, too.

"If I know ball players, darn few of them would give up a percentage of their salary to a manager.

Budge Worn Out By Campaign In Australia

U. S. L. T. A. Officials Pulled Boner in Approving Trip

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Don Budge, whose winter campaign in Australia has proved something less than the triumphant procession it was intended to be, finally is ready to leave for home, and none too soon for the peace of mind of this country's tennis fathers.

The champion and his touring companion, Gene Mako, are expected to sail for California within a day or two. They will be welcomed heartily upon their arrival and told that if they don't play another lick of tennis until the middle of July it will be esteemed a high favor by the Davis Cup committee.

For the committee has awakened belatedly to the painful thought that it might have blundered in shipping Budge out of earshot of the wicked professional promoters. They feel now that it might have been better to let their white hope stay at home and taken a chance on his ability to withstand financial blandishments.

WORN TO FRAZZLE

As I tis, Budge comes back worn to a frazzle after over a year of constant competitive tennis. His two defeats by Baron Gottfried von Cramm and a loss to Jack Bromwich make it all too obvious that he has lost the playing pitch that made him unbeatable in England and America last summer.

Bromwich, in particular, couldn't have touched him with a pole at the time Budge was winning the Davis Cup at Wimbledon.

The shoulder injury Don received in an automobile accident just before going to Australia has had no chance to mend properly. A few weeks ago at Adelaide he was so weak and ill that a physician ordered him to rest. The dispatches have been read with mounting discomfort by those charged with keeping the Davis Cup on this side.

From the showing they have made in Australia, it seems clear that Budge and Mako will have to be broken up as the cup doubles combination. They haven't been able to beat anybody. Three times they have been trimmed by Bromwich and Adrian Quist, the new Australian partnership that America might be called upon to meet in the challenge round. Right now Wayne Sabin is tipped to be paired with Budge when the cup is defended next September.

"Of course, we can't tell these boys to stop playing tennis, but we would be pleased if Budge didn't touch a racket again until mid-July," said one tennis official. "As we are concerned only with the challenge round, we won't need to start getting the team together so early as in past years."

WIMBLEDON INVITATION

It is doubtful, from what he said, that the members of the American Cup squad wil. be sent to Wimbledon, though Budge probably will receive an invitation, expenses paid, to defend his all-England title.

The cup committee is gambling everything on Budge's ability to regain his top form and make a successful defense this time against the challenging country, certain to be either Germany of Australia.

One Instance of How We Are Being Fleeced

Forbes Relates How Bureaucrats Handle Relief Funds

By B. C. FORBES

The average wages paid, mostly to girls and boys, by the largest concern in one line of business, is $20 a week.

Federal bureaucrats, to have exactly the same kind of work done, pay, out of relief funds, 99 employes from $2000 to $4500 each a year, 5 others $5200; 18, $6000; 6, $6800; and one, $8500. Some 245 others get from $1260 to $1800.

How can this be reconciled with the administration's professed anxiety to exercise economy?

Since 1933 you and I and other taxpayers have been charged $4,000,000 for having newspapers clipped—by an array of high-priced tax-eaters—for Washington bureaucrats.

Incredible?

NOT ENOUGH FUNDS

Senator Rush D. Holt of West Virginia, after checking up the 1937 record, writes:

"Many appealing just for a chance to work at $30, $40 or $50 a month are told there are not enough funds for them to be employed. Many instances of waste exist within the organization.

"The National Emergency Council is an agency created in 1933, whose principal work is to clip newspapers. The bureau informs the officials about the public attitude in the state. This work is not done by relief workers but by individuals at high salaries. Their salaries come from the money appropriated to feed the hungry. Since its creation there has been appropriated to this agency, out of the relief fund, $3,907,332."

After enumerating the salaries already quoted, he adds:

"Certain officeholders are more interested in getting political workers on the payroll than administering relief funds to the needy. It is time to clean up the whole relief program and give the money to those who need it."

This indictment, please note, comes from a Southern Senator.

In addition to this costly clipping service, I am told that practically every department in the administration has its own independent clipping bureau.

If it be considered necessary to keep close tabs on what the newspapers say about Washingtonians, would it not be infinitely better either to have the work done by government workers paid similarly to those doing the same kind of work in the business world or to have the whole job done by a private agency at enormous saving to taxpayers?

TAX GATHERERS

On top of hordes of paid tax-collectors in all branches of all kinds of government in this country, private corporations in many cases are compelled to turn tax gatherers.

Socony-Vacuum, for example, last year handed over to the federal government, for its own taxes and levies on gasoline sold, no less than $113,421,000. Taxes paid to New York state reached almost $18,000,000, more than 4 per cent of the Empire State's total tax revenue. Taxes amounted to approximately $3300 per employee, $1020 per stockholder, $3.50 per share of stock outstanding, contrasted with only 80 cents paid in dividends.

Tax-leviers and tax-eaters are eating into the very vitals of the nation!

When will a halt be called?

(Copyright, 1938, by B. C. Forbes)

Boston Brokers' Market Opinions

The rally may continue somewhat further in the case of the mail order, farm equipment, aircraft and the better rails and utilities but in general it seems best to maintain a conservative trading attitude and give more thought to liquidating doubtful holdings than adding to commitments.—J. A. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

General sentiment has improved considerably this month. Advocate holding stocks for higher prices.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Other conditions having developed so badly, it seems unlikely that this upturn will have the vigor of other ones in the past few months. Possibly it begins a period of better demand for the few issues which have a reasonable chance of maintaining earning power under present conditions. For the rest, it provides a better opportunity for liquidating.—G. M., P Murphy & Co.

We would now look for a resumption of the up trend tomorrow, following any further irregularity which may be ahead during the early trading.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

The further uncertainty as to the immediate business outlook prevents any real change in the main price trend.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

The market's recent action, in meeting support in the vicinity of the previously established lows and in subsequently turning vigorously upward, strengthens our belief that the steel news and the interpretations thereof will be reflected in a near future upward trend.—J. S. Bache & Co.

Advertising Cost To Public Small

Survey Proves Consumers Benefited; Outlay Tiny Fraction of Sales Price

Advertising has done more to raise the American standard of living than any other medium of education and public information. It has made the people of the United States the best groomed in the world. It has changed our habits of living for the better and has lifted the average of intelligence.

Yet advertising, instead of increasing the cost of commodities to the consumer, actually has effected a drop in price levels because of wider consumption and mass production.

The following article gives a concrete example of how and why advertising overhead is NOT absorbed by the consumer, except in a relative and theoretical sense.

This is the story of Fred Grant and his wife, taken from the records of a recent laboratory study of advertising costs sponsored by one of New York's suburban civic associations.

Grant is the office manager for an importing concern downtown. He is a careful, prudent man. His wife shares his keen sense of values.

A few weeks ago, when someone in the association started to talk about the advertising costs of nationally-known products, particularly that percentage of the cost popularly believed to be borne by the consumer, Grant offered a resolution. This was it:

"Inasmuch as the greater portion of articles of food, apparel, household furnishings, soap, toiletries and cosmetics used in this country are merchandised wholly or in part through the medium of advertising, I propose that we make an investigation of advertising costs."

STARTED FROM SCRATCH

The resolution was passed and Grant was named chairman of a committee, consisting of professional men, a few housewives, and two local merchants. As they knew little about advertising except its physical aspects in newspapers and magazines, they had to start from scratch. But they knew where they were going.

First, Grant got in touch with such advertising authorities as Paul S. Willis, president of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America; Mrs. Christine Frederick, founder of the League of Advertising Women, and author of "Selling Mrs. Consumer," and Hugh M. Foster, outstanding economist and writer.

That was just the beginning. Armed with statistics, they set out upon the actual experiment and here's the way they went about it:

Sunday dinner is the big meal of the week in the Grant home, so they decided to make Mrs. Grant's Saturday shopping trip the focal point of the test. They would make their purchases in the usual way, but confine them to advertised brands.

MARKET BASKET

The market basket—merely a figure of speech because Mrs. Grant had all her things delivered—was to be filled with enough foodstuffs for five. The Grants have three children in their 'teens.

The bought the following items:

One 10-pound ham, marketed by a well-publicized packer, $3.00.

Two cans of a popular brand of soup, 20c.

One can of asparagus, 35c.

One can of spinach, 15c.

One can of peas, large, 18c.

One package of rice, 10c.

One pound of coffee, in sealed can, 30c.

One dozen California oranges, 29c.

One bottle of Grade B milk, 14c.

One loaf of bread, 10c.

One chocolate layer cake, 20c.

One pound of butter, 45c.

Their bill was $5.48. The Sunday dinner, of course, was actually less expensive than that, because a lot of the ham and butter was left over for the next day, and the coffee was really a supply for several days.

ADVERTISING COST NIL

But Grant was not interested in the food bill so much as he was interested in that part of it earmarked for advertising overhead. Figuring on the statistical breakdown he had obtained from the experts, he was able to make a remarkably accurate report. When he turned it in to the association they were—well, flabbergasted is the word.

Actually, the advertising overhead had cost the Grants nothing at all, because without advertising they would not have been able to buy standard products at uniformly low standard prices.

The cooking costs for the canned vegetables alone would have jumped the total expense of the dinner, not to mention that, before advertising lowered the cost, some of the items would have fallen into the price class of stone crabs at Miami Beach.

But the theoretical percentage of advertising costs for the whole bill of $5.48 was less than he paid for his afternoon paper. Figured out in cold digits, running down along a long array of decimals, it was .028636, or less than 3c.

OVERHEAD SMALL

Grant had a little difficulty in working out the advertising overhead for each can of soup. This proved to be 36-1000 of a cent per can. The vegetables ran a bit higher at 1-10 of a cent per can. He found that for his 10-pound ham at a total cost of $3, he was supposed to have paid 1½ cents for advertising.

Mrs. Frederick, a recognized consumer authority, sounds the keynote of the basic principles of advertising economics when she says that:

"We consumers are glad to admit that constructive national advertising by the country's great firms has revolutionized the American home and dinner table and has done away with dependence on seasons in foods.

"My object as a consumer, and that of all consumers, is to get the greatest value for my money with the least expenditure of time and effort.

TIME SAVER

"What shoes shall I buy the baby? What flour, what soap, what toilet requisites? No housewife today can't afford to waste time in repeated analyses. She can become a wise and thrifty buyer only by purchasing brands that have become specific standards to her, with defined and known qualities in weight, size, wear, etc.

"For example, four basic household commodities—soup, bread, soap and clothing—have been taken over by industry, standardized and produced on a large scale in units that are cheaper and far better than the housewife herself could possibly produce them.

"Countless examples of price lowering due to consumer loyalty to nationally advertised brands could be instanced, such as the drop in cost to the consumer of hosiery, gelatine desserts, trademarked fruits, soft drinks, cameras, and even such larger and costlier items as radios, electric refrigerators and automobiles."

New Farm Bill Won't Work, Says Haney

Cotten Experiment to Cost Government 300 Millions

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—No sooner is the "wages and hours bill" bottled up and virtually defeated, than the disease breaks out in another quarter. Now it is the new farm bill.

And note this: The bill is called the AAA of 1938. This is the name of the bill that the Supreme Court almost unanimously declared to be unconstitutional.

Probably the present edition is worse than the original. The AAA bill of 1938 proposes the following:

Complete federal government control over the production of cotton, wheat, corn, rice and tobacco.

The fixing of production allotments for individual farmers.

The fixing of marketing quotas for individual farmers.

The fixing of prices.

The payment of rewards (bonuses and loans) and the exaction of penalties.

The purchase and carrying of huge quantities of the above farm crops by the federal government.

* * *

The bill is patchwork and a mess which few congressmen even pretend to understand. The administration leaders, however, forced it through the House under gag rule. The total time allowed for debate was about the time it would take to give the 100 page measure a careful reading once through!

The reason for this high-handed procedure is the fact that there is bitter opposition to the bill. It comes from rival farm groups such as dairy farmers, from consumers, from the city labor interests, from those who seek to balance the budget, and from those opposed to federal control over local business.

The large amount of compulsory regimentation that the bill provides is widely resented.

In my judgment, the measure is thoroughly bad, for the following reasons:

The attempt to substitute political control for demand and supply conditions will prove futile. It always has failed. (Look at Brazilian coffee control.)

One proof of this is the futility of the control methods proposed in the bill. The New Dealers are still trying to control bushels and bales by controlling the acreage planted! (It can't be done. The present record-breaking cotton crop was raised on an ordinary acreage.) The marketing quotas are to be fixed on the basis of acres planted, not crops produced. The acreage allotted to each farmer is frozen on the basis of his past planting. It is pretended that some day the government will sell its millions of dollars worth of crops bought from farmers at high prices! It is pretended that farmers and politicians will drop the bonuses and loans as soon as prices fall below "parity" or crops below "normal!"

Anybody who believes the foregoing controls will work is not fit for any business.

Finally, the bill provides no funds!

It will probably cost the government at least $300,000,000 for the cotton experiment alone. Where will the money come from? It will come from your pocket and mine—through "processing taxes" on our shirts, dresses, sheets, towels, handkerchiefs, tires, etc.

In addition, there will be taxes on our bread, cereals, and tobacco.

In the end, the treasury will take huge losses on huge holdings of stored crops.

* * *

The cotton feature is probably worst of all, for in addition to contributing largely to the foregoing evils, it will further take away what is left of the foreign market. The Smith amendment means that the federal government will be holding about 7 million bales, and pay a 2 cent bonus on top of the present 8½ cent loan cotton. This is designed to raise the price to over 10½ cents a pound, which would destroy the foreign market and eventually ruin many cotton growers.

Western Union Has Lower Net

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (INS)—Western Union Telegraph Company preliminary report for 1937 showed net of $3,325,769, or $3.18 a common share vs. $7,190,120 or $6.89 in 1936.

Although gross revenues were $2,000,000 higher at $102,076,710, an increase of $5,500,000 in expenditures, taxes and rents brought this item to $76,204,644 and reduced net.

Brakes Applied to Upward Market Via Profit Taking

Numerous Banks Have Paid Off RFC Funds

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—End of the year bank statements revealed further progress in making over the financial structures of the great money reservoirs of the nation.

Out of earnings and recoveries of temporary losses numerous banks have paid off funds advanced to them by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Walter S. McLucas, president of the National Bank of Detroit, called the attention of his stockholders to a plan for converting earned surplus into common stock which will replace an equivalent amount of preferred stock outstanding.

SUMMARY OF FIGURES

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in complying with my request for summary figures concerning all banks, said:

"Our total bank stock investments at the present time amount to $561,972,493.94. We disbursed for preferred stock, capital notes and debentures $1,068,630,286.56, of which $507,577,792.62 has been repaid."

This statement brings up to date the Federal government's stupendous emergency experiment in financing the financier during troubled times.

At the outset when the R. F. C. began to take bank preferred stock, Mr. Jones indicated that the government agency did not intend to exercise the voting rights held by the shares unless it felt that the management was unsatisfactory. Asked for the record in this respect, Mr. Jones replied:

"There have been very, very few instances where it has been necessary for us to intervene by reason of management problems."

Evidently recognizing that bank earnings reflect current conditions and interest rates as well as managerial efficiency, Mr. McLucas has pioneered by giving the stockholders additional criteria. For example, he presents comparable data for each of the five years the bank has been in operation on the number of accounts served and the amount of deposits.

Another innovator in preparing a bank's annual report has been Harvey D. Gibson, president of the Manufacturers' Trust Company in New York. In presenting earnings for last year, Mr. Gibson gets away from technical accounting terms and explains with the utmost simplicity and clarity what disposition has been made of the net operating earnings. He also gives comparisons with earnings for three previous years.

IMPROVEMENT NOTEWORTHY

These improvements in conveying information to those interested in banks are noteworthy, because in the past conventional banking reports were so cryptic as to be almost meaningless unless supplemented by information not appearing within the document itself.

In times of stress it became apparent that the aura of mystery thus created served no useful purpose.

Depositors, stockholders and the general public will be more rational in their dealings with banks to the extent that they are informed about the realities.

Arguing as to the need for a new form of elementary bookkeeping which will tell the public the truth about the relations among capital, labor and government, Mr. Gibson said:

"Perhaps the present apparent lack of teamwork may be accounted for by the fact that the great portion of our population finds it difficult to understand, from the information available, the operations of our important industries, which are largely responsible for their employment. Certainly, the ordinary form of report issued by most corporations gives little, if any, idea to the average man who works and votes as to the equation of returns to capital and labor; for such reports speak in terms of many millions of dollars, and these large totals are too often complicated and misleading."

Casco Products

Casco Products Corp. declared a dividend of $1.50 on common, payable Feb. 23 to stock of record Feb. 18.

Activity Best On Morning Advance

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—The direction was upward in today's stock market, with rails and coppers touching off a buying trek in which virtually all industrial groups joined.

Profit realins put brakes on the climb after numerous issues had pushed up fractions to 2 points generally and a few as much as 4 or so. Activity was best on the morning advance. The pace was slow near the final hour, but most leaders were only small amounts under the their top marks.

Brokers reported inflation sentiment was a bit more pronounced in financial quarters and some speculative forces apparently shifted to the buying side when it was again evident offerings were scanty in declining intervals.

Carrier loans led the bond division on a quiet forward tilt. Commodities were moderately mixed.

FAVORED STOCKS

Favored stocks the greater part of the day included Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Anaconda, Kennecott, Howe Sound, Cerro De Pasco, Chrysler, General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, National Steel, J. I. Case, International Harvester, J. C. Penney, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, du Pont, U. S. Rubber, Allis Chalmers, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, Canada Dry and Loew's.

American Telephone flopped at one time but eventually righted itself. Most utilities and oils swung in a restricted orbit.

Selected steels were supported despite yesterday's price cuts. The feeling here was that, while reductions in cold rolled sheets may spread to other steel products, increased mill operations may more than offset the slashes.

The thought was expressed too, that union labor might consent to some moderately lower wage scales because of price paring and the possibility weekly pay envelopes would even be larger if steel buying expands.

Helpful were the U. S. Steel January shipment figures disclosing an aggregate of 518,322 tons compared with 489,070 in December. It was the first month-to-month increase since early 1937. The total in January last year, though, was well above 1,000,000 tons.

Rails were still buoyed by expectations a favorable freight rate decision would be handed down soon. Coppers reflected a recent jump in export demand and hopes armaments and industrial demands would spur purchases of this metal.

The sharp drop in Western Union's net last year was believed to have been well discounted. The stock opened one hour and 15 minutes late at a slight decline which it finally erased.

MIXED OPINIONS

Boardroom opinions were mixed as to whether the latest cut in steel prices would bring a rush of buying in the metal. From other sectors overnight market news was none too cheering.

On the cloudy side of the picture was the bank clearings survey for the week ended yesterday, disclosing a drop in this barometer to the lowest level in over four years and the thirteenth consecutive decline under the corresponding period a year ago.

The Federal Reserve Board also reported department store sales for January were approximately 4 per cent under the 1937 month, but said the change from December was "slightly less" than the usual seasonal recession.

At the beginning of foreign currency transactions the French franc was up .00¼ of a cent at 3.28¾ cents. Sterling was unchanged at $5.01¼.

N. Y. Exchange Closed Saturday

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—All domestic security and commodity exchanges, with the exception of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, Boston Wool and various livestock markets, will be closed Saturday, February, 12, in commemoration of Lincoln's Birthday.

European and Canadian markets, except for the usual Saturday closing of the London and Paris stock exchanges will operate as usual.

N. E. Mutual Has Fine Record, Report Shows

At the 94th annual meeting of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., President George Willard Smith reported that during 1937, "the new membership and the new insurance in this company, amounting to $156,642,000, were greater than in any other year; that the insurance in force climbed close to one-and-a-half billions, $1,471,806,000, a record total; and that there was a large increase, $26,671,000, in the asset structure, which is now $402,321,000. Even during the years of depression, the New England Mutual assets grew consistently; in fact, today they are double those of ten years ago."

President Smith stated that "the principal income was, as always, from premiums on insurance and annuities, amounting to $56,929,000. Second was the amount received in interest, dividends, and real estate rentals, $15,922,000, an increase of over half a million. Payments to policyholders, beneficiaries and annuitants were $35,273,000, which is $518,000 greater than in 1936. Almost two-thirds of this went to living policyholders, including annuitants, and one-third to beneficiaries. Surrendered insurance continued the decrease of recent years."

BONDS OWNED

Bonds owned total $235,912,000, while preferred and guaranteed stocks constitute 1.2 per cent and common stocks 1.6 per cent of the assets.

Real estate, not including home office property of $2,997,000, amounted to $27,356,000, or 6.8 per cent of total assets. The increase during 1937 was one-third less than in 1936, and all overdue interest on mortgages foreclosed was charged off. There has been a pronounced improvement in rental revenue, and net earnings were almost three times those of 1936.

All liabilities, including dividends set aside for 1938, were $387,026,000. Surplus and contingency funds amounted to $15,295,000.

The demand for policy loans was normal during the year, except for a sharp upturn in October, immediately following the drop in stock market quotations.

From the earnings of the year of $10,996,000, the directors voted $10,150,000 for dividend distribution during 1938. This will continue for premium-paying policies the scale of dividends adopted two years ago, and compares with $9,500,000 voted for 1937.

A point was made of the fact that the expense of conducting the business, excluding investment expense, was the lowest in proportion to insurance in force since 1933.

Last year the company experienced the favorable mortality rate of 55 per cent, as compared with an average of 58 per cent during the preceding five years.

PURCHASES BY WOMEN

Mr. Smith called attention to the increased purchases of life insurance by women. In the past year 18 per cent of the new policies were on their lives. Like men, women are finding life insurance indispensable for the protection of dependents, in providing adequate retirement incomes, in meeting inheritance taxes, and for guaranteed investment returns.

There is also a marked trend toward the use of income settlements rather than lump settlements. Incomes were designated in one-quarter of the new policies, while another quarter provided by their original terms for monthly incomes. This latter group assures monthly payments aggregating 372,800.

A particularly optimistic note was the announcement by President Smith that negotiations had been completed for the purchase of a new site "for a home office building near Copley square, Boston. On this site the company will erect a modern, efficiently arranged and dignified home." The well-known present office on Milk street, with its graceful clock-tower, was built in 1875 and is now filled to capacity.

U. S. Steel January Shipments Larger

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Shipments of finished steel products in January by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries totaled 518,322 tons, compared with 489,070 in December and 1,419,918 in January, 1937, the company reported today.

Showing the first month-to-month increase since early in 1937 the January shipments ran 29,252 tons above December. They were, however, down 631,596 tons from January, 1937.

Price of Lead Again Slashed

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP) — The price of lead today was cut $5 a ton by leading producers. It was the second slash so far this week, and established the metal at the lowest price since 1936. It reached a high of 7.75 cents last March.

American Smelting & Refining fixed the price at 4.50 cents a pound, New York, against 4.75 cents quoted previously. A similar reduction was made by St. Joseph Lead Co.

December Oil Stocks Increase

Bureau of Mines reports December oil stocks increased 2,319,000 barrels and gasoline stocks, including finished, natural and unfinished, increased 5,973,000 barrels.

Indicated domestic demand for motor fuel in December was 39,457,000 barrels, a daily average of 1,273,000 barrels. This was slightly under the demand of a year ago.

Distillers Corp. To Buy Stock

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (INS)—Distillers Corp.-Seagrams, Ltd., has accepted an offer from Brinteen Investments, Ltd., to purchase 5000 shares of cumulative 5 per cent preferred stock with warrants, at $100 and interest.

Output of Shoes Is Increasing

N. E. Retailers Are Reducing Their Inventories

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Of the major New England industries, shoe manufacturing alone has shown a steady uptrend. Dun & Bradstreet's weekly review of business conditions in this area places production between 55 and 60 per cent of capacity, and operations are still being gradually stepped up.

Textile operations are still irregular and employment is at a low point. Wholesale business is only fair as retailers continue to concentrate their attention on reducing stocks. While they have been meeting with fair success they have not yet begun to order freely. In shoe lines stocks are close to what the trade considers normal levels. But quantity buyers are holding back and most staple lines are moving slowly. While the situation presents something of a paradox it is undoubtedly explained by price uncertainties. Wage cuts have been reported from some quarters and leather prices have been without a definite trend, and the hide and skin market, although quiet, is weak.

GENERAL OUTLOOK

In general New England business appears to be in that dull stage which so consistently marks low points in depressions. There is little life in any industry and interest in what is going on and what might happen is almost totally absent. Expected increases in wool sales did not materialize in January and prices have trended downward as a result. Finished woolen demand is spotty and inventory losses taken late in 1937 seem to be discouraging all attempts to build stocks. A dismal picture perhaps but one that means healthy conditions are being restored and the way paved for a real resumption.

MARKET FACES TEST

The stock market is facing a thorough test of its position. A slight upturn has been engineered this week, and the two averages indicate their willingness to move together. It is all very minor up to date, but intermediate trends grow out of just such movements. If the list reacts on moderate volume, and the lows of last week are not approached too closely, it will surely look as though traders and investors may look forward to a period of temporary sunshine. In the event last week's lows are cracked by both rails and industrials, it will be necessary to admit the bearish forecasts of much lower prices have some substance.

TECHNICAL NOTES

Insofar as we are concerned, the most important action will come in the rail section. The group has lifted alright, but somewhat too slowly for us. In order to compensate for its sluggishness, a restricted dip would be construed as good evidence of a firmer base. Another technical development worth noting is the one-day top made on the rally. It marks one of the few occasions when the market has lifted from a base that took more than several sessions to form, and reacted without first spending some time around a high point. Which, of course, is indicative of more careful accumulation instead of deliberate distribution.

New Haven's Jan. Gross Under 1936

Preliminary figures indicate that January gross revenues of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad showed a decline of around 13 per cent from those of a year ago. In December gross was off about 17 per cent from the like period in the previous year.

Passenger revenues, however, continue to run ahead of the previous year.

Friends Honor Bridal Couple

WILLIAM R. THOMSON MRS. JOHN R. CONROY JOHN H. CONROY MISS JENNIE SWEENEY

Meet the happy bridal couple. That's what this group did at what was supposed to be an engagement party, at Steuben's but which proved to be a wedding feast instead. Those shown are, left to right, William R. Thomson, state superintendent of Jay's Specialty Shop; the wedded couple, Mrs. John H. Conroy and her husband, John H. Conroy, traffic manager of the firm and Miss Jennie Sweeney, director of the alteration room. The couple revealed they were secretly married Sept. 19. Business associates of Mr. Conroy presented the couple with a radio.

Here's Prize Winners In Del Rio Movie Test

Coincident with today's opening of their new co-starring picture, "International Settlement," with Dolores Del Rio and George Sanders, the Boston Evening American announces winners in the Dolores Del Rio film identification contest.

To Eleanor J. Scher of 12 Fayette street, Beverly, goes the first prize of $15, and to Evelyn Hanson of 65 Sunnyside avenue, Winthrop, the second award of $10.

Other cash prizes were won by the following:

Lieut. Charette Rites Held

LOWELL, Feb. 10—In a tribute befitting a hero, funeral services for Lieutenant George Charette, retired naval officer, were held in St. Jean Baptiste Church here today.

Lieutenant Charette, holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor and for more than 40 years an enlisted man and officer in the navy, returned here, his native city, in 1925 following his retirement.

He was given the medal of honor following the naval battle of Santiago de Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

State, city and federal officials attended the funeral. Flags throughout the city were at half mast and school classes were suspended to allow the children to watch the funeral procession.

The body will be taken to Washington tonight for burial in Arlington Cemetery, Saturday.

Dr. Schwartz a Father

Mrs. Shirley Schwartz, wife of Dr. Louis N. Schwartz, Boston City Hospital executive, today was the mother of an eight-pound baby boy, born in Massachusetts Women's Hospital in Roxbury.

Stokers Strike Hangs Fire as Poll Continues

The threatened strike of the newly organized firemen of the steam trawler fishing fleet was still hanging fire today with most of the engine stokers away at sea preventing the planned balloting.

Union officials of the National Maritime Union which has taken the fisher-firemen under its wing will be forced to conduct balloting in driblets, catching the "steamers" as they come into the Fish Pier.

Owners of the fishing boats are adamant, however, and will not consider the demanded dollar increase in firemen's daily wage.

They expressed themselves as determined to withdraw the steamers from fishing, stating that operation of these boats is conducted at a loss.

Whenever it is possible the different fishing companies have taken off the steamers and replaced them with Diesel powered boats. The withdrawn boats are stripped of all gear and then sunk at sea or sold outright to "junkies."

In the past several years two steam trawlers have been sunk and five others junked.

This is the fate promised for the remaining fleet of 32, according to Edward H. Cooley, manager for the Massachusetts Fisheries Association and secretary of the Federated Fishing Boats of America, owners organization.

ARTHRITIS

Miss Agnes G. Fay, 58 Bigelow St., Brighton, Mass., says—"I had Arthritis, Rheumatic Fever and Otitis Media for years. My knee was very painful and I was lame. I was confined to bed with Rheumatic Fever for a year. I had doctors treat me but their treatment did not help me. My sister told me that Dr. Walsh had helped her and she said that he would help me. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and found that what my sister had told me was true. Dr. Walsh has helped me so that I am no longer lame and I feel fine now. I give this testimonial hoping that my experience will be a guide for others who suffer as I did." Signed, Agnes G. Fay.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1938

+ + Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged.—St. Matthew 7, 1-2. + +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. J. Stanley Light, St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Ernest T. Marble, Universalist Church, Norway, Me.

The Editor Says:

"No Man E'er Felt the Halter Draw With Good Opinion of the Law."—From John Trumbull's "McFingal."

THAT quotation occurs as most apt in reading an Associated Press dispatch from Tokyo which says:

"A Japanese spokesman declared American and British re-armament programs incite other countries to take up the naval building race."

That statement is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that it was given out on the eve of the query put to Japan by the United States, England and France as to whether or not Nippon was not, in contravention of the 5-5-3 agreement of 1936, building 43,000-ton war vessels.

The United States has set forth on a defensive naval and air program mainly BECAUSE OF JAPAN'S WARLIKE ATTITUDE, not only toward China but toward the rest of the world.

What Japan does she has been doing in SECRET—except welching on international treaties, which she does OPENLY.

Naturally, she does not care to contemplate a defensively armed and impregnable America.

So she, the Wolf of the Orient, turns tail and joins the pack, screaming "WOLF! WOLF!"

What the "spokesman" of Japan is really troubled with is a BAD CONSCIENCE.

WISH NOT HIM BACK

"I do ordain and set apart, Saturday, February 12, 1938, as LINCOLN DAY."—Governor Hurley's proclamation.

On the birthdays of famous men it is customary for men and women to say, "If so and so could come back."

On Saturday next, Lincoln's birthday, you will undoubtedly say, "Thank Heaven, Lincoln cannot come back!"

He would find too much to puzzle and worry him, from Miami to Los Angeles, and from Dallas, Tex., to Bangor, Me.

In Lincoln's mind a thousand dollars was a respectable amount of money. He could never conceive of a nation's thinking in terms of the billion-dollar unit.

Every school child has read of the unhappiness that marked Lincoln's last days on earth, of the sleepless nights he spent in contemplation of the "staggering billion, nine hundred million dollar" debt that the Civil War piled up.

So now with the peacetime debt edging the forty-billion mark, you would be merciful not to wish him back, but rather to say:

"Rest, President Lincoln—rest in your restful grave, away from hate and fear and hopelessness. You were a great American, greatest of all save one."

WE GET THE CRUMBS

"The Massachusetts allotment of the $10,000,000 provided by the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Law will be $6968, Federal authorities revealed today."—International News Service.

For months Massachusetts and New England have realized that they were playing Santa Claus to the rest of the country. Consequently, this is only ADDITIONAL proof.

Six thousand, nine hundred and sixty-eight dollars isn't even a drop in the bucket when one has ten million dollars to give away.

It recalls the story of the father who felled a tree, gave enough wood to make a toothpick to the son he did not like, and the rest of the tree to the sons he did like.

Naturally, a considerable part of the ten million dollars will be raised by Massachusetts taxpayers. Their hard-earned cash will be taken from them and showered upon other States by officials who find it very easy to be generous with the other fellow's money.

However, there is some consolation in the news that we are going to get a small fraction of one per cent of the New Deal farm fund. Six thousand, nine hundred and sixty-eight dollars is something.

When the New Deal had millions available for free flood control, we received nothing.

WHY REBUKE THE COURT?

"The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has passed on the Flag Salute law and has held that the statute in no way works against the religious scruples of persons."—City Solicitor Patrick J. Shanahan of Lynn in address to the Legislative Committee on Education.

Attorney Shanahan offers a powerful argument in favor of retaining the compulsory flag salute law in its present form.

At this time, when the courts of America are generally attacked by radical elements, Senators and Representatives ought to think twice before rebuking our own highest judicial body.

That, of course, is exactly what the proposed alteration of the salute statute would do.

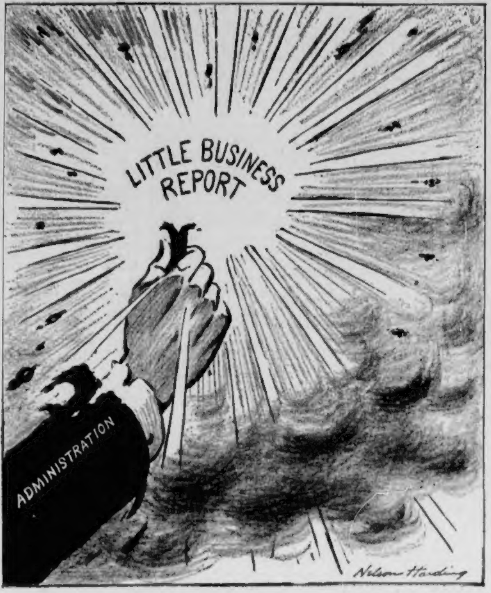
As a matter of fact, the claim that allegiance to the national emblem conflicts with the beliefs of certain religious sects is without foundation.

Nobody has ever asked Jehovah's Witnesses or any other group to regard Old Glory as they regard God. Jehovah's Witnesses are simply requested to honor Old Glory as they honor their fathers and mothers.

Certainly the banner that protects their lives, safeguards their religion and surrounds their homes with civilization instead of savagery deserves some show of gratitude.

Dynamite!

By Nelson Harding



The Little Business report, demanding relief from government oppression and confiscatory taxation, must be regarded as an honest and sincere expression of American opinion.

The thing now for the Administration to do is to face the fact that business, big and small, will prosper, if given the chance.

There is neither sense nor justice in continuing programs that can only mean more wage cuts, more unemployment and more horrible suffering for Americans.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.

JACK PEARL is another comedian to achieve a wish-fulfillment by appearing shortly in a straight dramatic role. Al Shean, a comic and surviving half of Gallagher and Shean, is an outstanding dramatic hit in the role of a kindly priest.

Pearl is last of the Dutch comedians to scramble the language in pop-bottle gurglings. Long after that Weberfieldian type of humor was extinct he was making a thousand or so a week exploiting topsy-turvy talk with his foil, Cliff Hall, on stage, radio and screen.

Like so many other of the dialect funsters, Pearl is a product of the lower East Side and arrived via Gus Edwards' kid revues. A shy fellow with a hang-dog wistfulness, he has been among the few to salt earnings when the going was good and is financially secure.

My favorite of all the old-time Dutch comedians was Cliff Gordon, brother of the now top producer, Max Gordon. Cliff was a standard vaudeville act whose routine never changed in the 20 years I saw him. Yet he never failed to bring down the house.

The Astors—Nancy and Waldorf—hid away during a large part of their Florida vacation in a sequestered inn at the sea edge near Delray. Zoe Beckley, who was in similar seclusion finishing up some magazine pieces, was nearby and plopped into them several times. Lord Astor's chief interest centered in the trailer life so pronounced in that state. He could scarcely believe that people lived in them and had no other homes. So Zoe showed them around and introduced them to a few of the other half.

Zoe Beckley, fresh from an expert secretarial job in Wall Street, came to the Evening Mail as a sob sister cub shortly after I went on the staff. Buxom, apple-cheeked, with a zest for life and an infectious laugh she did much to brighten the drabness of that gloomy editorial haven. Once she got a real whiff of printer's ink there was no stopping her. In a few months she was writing by-line stories and her name was placarded in box car type on delivery wagon posters.

I left the Evening Mail, at the abrupt request of the management, and the next I saw of Zoe was on deck of an ocean liner one moonlight night. She was one day out on way to interview Queen Marie of Rumania.

The same night the ship headed into a 75-mile gale and as we limped into port, all a shade of pea green, Zoe wrote in my autograph book: "In memory of Mrs. Atlantic's permanent wave."

A favorite dish of the practiced diner in the Chinese cafes is meat wormein, composed of Chinese vegetables, boiled noodles, a sprinkling of pork and a soupy goo poured over all. Since Earl Carroll transferred his talents to Hollywood I have been unable to keep up to the minute on Chinese emporiums. He was a bloodhound in scenting out such places.

They are always excellent until the crowd discovers them and then they somehow become all alike. Tops at the moment is a place on Canal street near the Bowery.

Tribute: About the finest compliment ever paid an actor was bestowed on John Drew by Booth Tarkington. Said Tarkington: "Drew could play Simon Legree so that Legree became a misunderstood gentleman."

A gentleman from Flemingsburg, Ky., writes of riding northward in a New York sight-seeing bus and of the megaphonist at a certain corner shouting: "On the left is the apartment house home of the columnist O. O. McIntyre." And I have been sitting at the front window trying to look nonchalant practically ever since.

Thingumbobs: George Arliss thinks Bette Davis is the Katharine Cornell of the screen . . . The original manuscript of Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" is for sale at $3500 . . . Paul Sann, a copy boy on the Evening Post a few months ago, recently had a by-line on a Page 1 story . . . J. B. Priestly is the only play author to make a curtain speech so far this season.

Memory: The cloying aroma from wet chickens after a summer shower.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Heaven deliver us from the Seven Deadly Bores, and from the sins of the virtuous, oh, spare us!

From the CRITICAL, who search out our weaknesses with a microscope and cast a spotlight on our flaws and failings, deliver us!

For they fill us with self-contempt and drive us to white lies and false alibis.

Deliver us from the fastidious; yea from the finicky and hyper-critical, oh, set us free.

For they are as a continual sound of riveting on tender nerves, as pepper in the eyes, or an ache in the ear. They cause us constant misery.

Deliver us from the know-it-alls, from whose mouths drop imitation pearls of wisdom and paste jewels of thought; who delight to "inform" and to "instruct" us; who treat us as morons and regard us as dimwits.

Deliver us from the SUPERIOR! For to look up to them giveth us a crick in the neck and afflicteth us with eye-strain and ennui.

Lo, a sinner may be turned from his sinning and a hard answer silenceth a fool; but from the persecutions of the deadly GOOD there is NO escape!

He that filleth thee with vanity and apple-sauce may not be thy best friend; but he that shattereth thine illusions about thyself, is surely thy worst enemy.

And even an unflattering mirror is less disheartening than one of these.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

MAN and boy, this onlooker has seen some strange goings on in the big city, but this elaborately cuckoo business of Benny Goodman driving the young people crazy does seem like something to write home about.

In Hell's Kitchen, many years ago, we used to see Negro revivalists get their congregations rolling on the floor by the hypnotic rhythm of a chanted phrase, but never did we report a big theater turned into a squirrel cage, with 3000 deliriously daffy youngsters making ecstatic goat noises and shagging in the aisles to the incitement of any ultra-sock music whatever.

But it can and did happen here, with university psychologists rushing to the scene with their notebooks—and no wonder!

Of course, this Benny Goodman has eloven hoofs in his glossy patent leather shoes. His are the Orphic and Dionysic mysteries which started the young people kicking up and making bleating goat noises thousands of years ago. That business trickled down into some weird psychic vagaries of the Middle Ages, culminating in the incredible dance frenzies of the Crusades, whirl-winding whole populations in a dizzy, dancing swirl across Europe.

We call it swing. And if you want to know what swing is, you'll merely be getting tracksore if you try to find out.

We have been befuddled by experts on this issue, and we know when to quit. Arthur Cremin, director of the New York School of Music, thinks we ought to pass a law against swing music, and prepares a bill for introduction in the New York State Legislature.

Mr. Cremin is a violinist, the president of the American Creative League of Music Students, and the author of piano text books. He believes this conjure music is a dangerous thing to turn loose, and may induce strange and uncontrollable behavior, particularly among adolescents.

If you don't mind risking a nervous breakdown, just fancy a State Legislature battling over the question of whether this or that phrase of modern grunt-iron music is in violation of the statute as herein promulgated and later amended. They would have to try out the tune, and then the Legislature might start shagging and bleating, and the Supreme Court might get that way, too, and we'd all go wacky together. That doesn't seem to be the answer.

Giving all due emphasis to Benny Goodman's trumpeting to the college trade, as a curious and possibly disturbing phenomenon of youth behavior, it is just as well to note that these outbreaks are cyclical, like depressions and styles, and somehow youth rides through them.

It was "flaming youth" in the boom years, and hip flasks and raffish behavior in the prohibition years. But the youngsters kept on going to college, getting jobs, getting married and moving on to the years when they, too, will be shuddering over the vagaries of errant youth.

Somebody ought to calm down the professor who wants to pass a law. I have an idea we'll be going stale when boys and girls no longer squirm and undulate to the tooting of Benny Goodman and his likes. Vachel Lindsay reported it faithfully in his poem, "The Congo," when jungle dwellers were "beating on the table, as hard as they were able."

We share our emotions with all living things. Our mind is a new toy which came along only yesterday, or perhaps early this morning. The Benny Goodman outbreak may not have been edifying, but it was understandable. Getting an occasional earful of swing, here and there around town, I can only murmur that one may still hope for the best.

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.

THERE was no fooling in Secretary Hull's timely but blunt request of Japan for exact information about the superdreadnaughts she is reported to be building.

The reason the Secretary of State asked for that data is that he does not have the information, and wants it.

It may seem strange that this is so, but it is a fact. All of the resources of the United States in the field of foreign information have been insufficient in the attempt to break down the screen of secrecy around Japan's mysterious war and defense plans.

It is known that the State Department's own sources of military information in Japan have dried up. Reports of consuls give nothing. There are, of course, three other main sources of foreign military information.

None of the three has come across with positive reports on battleship-building. Plenty of rumors.

But American information secret services do not accept rumors as facts. No report is filed as a fact until the report is proved to be true.

It is pretty well understood in Washington, however, that Japanese spies in the United States know all about there is to know about the American military establishments and the Panama Canal.

Incidentally, these Japanese spies know some things that are not true. Some day this may fool them.

There has been a tightening up against foreign spies during the past few months.

Debt and taxes are subjecting the American people and American business to a process of strangulation, the full purport of which is as yet scarcely appreciated.

For the first time since the New Deal began its astronomical spending an attempt to find out just how the books stand has been made.

The student is Representative Albert J. Engel, of Michigan, a member of the House Appropriations Committee.

He told a startled House the other day that the national debt on January 21 amounted to $37,429,450,693, official Treasury statement.

He informed the House that Jesse Jones recently informed the committee that $2,709,355,000 now carried as R.F.C. assets would have to be charged off as losses.

This, said Engel, brings the total debt to $40,138,805,693, as of January 21, 1938.

The House gasped as Mr. Engel produced official statistics to show:

The public and private indebtedness of the United States has reached the incredible total of $133,414,805,693.

The national, state and local indebtedness, plus long term private indebtedness, have reached the point where they EQUAL 99.4 PER CENT OF THE ASSESSED VALUATION OF EVERY PIECE OF REAL AND PERSONAL PROPERTY PLACED UPON THE ASSESSMENT ROLLS BY THE ASSESSING OFFICERS OF THE COUNTRY.

The interest is a burden of $5,000,000,000 a year.

We owe $60 of public debt for every $73 we owe in private debt.

We also owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Engel! He has exposed this frightful incubus of debt for the first time.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

THE American Civil Liberties Union congratulates itself, in a recent survey, that not a single Communist is now in jail in America for political activity and "the civil rights of Communists are now generally exercised without interference."

Meanwhile in COMMUNIST Russia the jails are filled and the shooting walls are crowded with men and women guilty of "political activity," and the civil rights of those who oppose Stalin are as extinct as were civil rights in Russia under the Romanoffs—even "deader."

These very Communists among us who now boastingly enjoy their freedom of utterance and their political activity would substitute Stalin's brutalitarian state for the free America that gives them their liberties if the Communists came into power in this country.

PONDER ON THAT, AMERICANS!

The daily tidal-wave of printed news that comes to our breakfast tables washes up some strange characters. Here is one:

The late Eugene Arnett, of Oklahoma City, spent $1,000,000 seeking a formula for a "superman" via diet and gland control. He worked 100 hours a week. He ate only one full meal a week. He read a book every day. He wrote a book on "World Drainage." He developed a cross between a cucumber and a gourd (a "gourdcumber"). He planned a colony where everybody would wear Greek costumes. And, according to his wife, "he had the gold-greed of a miser."

For all that, Arnett was a hard-headed and successful manager of a big insurance company.

These odd characters are the cream of life. It is better to be a little "screwy" than to be a mental robot.

Speaking of odd products of nature, there is being celebrated at present throughout the world the 250th anniversary of the birth of one of the most remarkable human beings who ever lived—Emmanuel Swedenborg.

Swedenborg was a chemist, mineralogist, geologist, scientist, botanist, clairvoyant and the founder of a religious sect known as the Swedenborgians. He described the angels and the streets of heaven as minutely as you would describe the people you know and the physical aspect of the street you live on.

Like Leonardo Da Vinci and Goethe, Swedenborg's brain seemed to be the warehouse of all knowledge, human and divine. He was a poet, too, for he was the author of that beautiful line:

"In heaven the angels are advancing continually toward the spring time of their youth."

"A colossal soul" Emerson called Swedenborg.
